INTRODUCTION

These reports are intended for a general, nonspecialist audience. They run the gamut of the arts and sciences, historical and current events, and should provide the reader with useful introductions to given topics. May they encourage a few happy hours of suggestive thought!

Times Square, New York City. Ayala and Makati Avenues, Philippines. Tverskaya Zastava Square, Moscow. Grande Champagne, France. These are world famous sites of intersections, junctions at which two or more roads converge, and these sites see automobile and pedestrian traffic in the tens of millions. In the field of politics, intersections are less than a century old but have attracted human traffic in the hundreds of millions. The first road was laid one hundred and fifty years ago and bore heavy traffic beginning in the twentieth century, and has dominated the political establishment ever since. This road was laid in the mid nineteenth century by Karl Marx. The road is called class war and as traffic along it increased, the Earth shook to its core and the institutions of freedom crumbled into dust. Listen to the sounds of the traffic, listen to the shaking, the rumbling and the mass ruination, and hear the banging ticks of a doomsday clock tolling out the midnight hour of civilization. Listen to the founder of identity politics, the most serious threat in history to freedom after the Abrahamic religions, proclaim that groups and not individuals are the primary realities, and these groups are mystical entities which exist apart from the individuals which comprise them. Listen to him proclaim that man cannot see these groups because they are by definition and in principle unperceivable, and man is blind because he perceives with his senses, and is blind because he has eyes. Listen to him proclaim that the name of the group which exists as a God on Earth is called the class. Listen to him proclaim that individuals do not exist in their own right as independent realities but exist insofar as they are members of classes, and individuals are defined solely in terms of their membership in classes. Listen to him proclaim that the movement, the progress and the laws of matter will bring forth the power and ascendancy of a class called the proletariat. Listen to him proclaim that this class is comprised of mindless, savage, unskilled, animal laborers, and these animal forms create all the wealth of mankind. Listen to him proclaim that the wealth created by the proletariat is plundered from it by another class called the bourgeois. Listen to him proclaim that this class is composed of people who work by the use of their minds, people who flourish as rational human persons ought to flourish, people such as scientists, inventors, artists, writers, entrepreneurs and financiers; that this class is in fact idle and survives by the oppression and exploitation of the proletariat; and the culmination of history will bring forth a series of epochal events involving these two classes. It will bring forth world revolution, world reconstitution, the extermination of the bourgeois by the proletarian victims, and the establishment, under the banners of liberation, of a party political, totalitarian, terror dictatorship: "The history of all hitherto existing society is the history of class struggles. Freeman and slave, patrician and plebeian, lord and serf, guildmaster and journeyman, in a word, oppressor and oppressed, stood in constant opposition to one another, carried on an uninterrupted, now hidden, now open fight, a fight that each time ended, either in a revolutionary reconstitution of society at large, or in the common ruin of the contending classes. In the earlier epochs of history, we find almost everywhere a complicated arrangement of society into various orders, a manifold gradation of social rank. In ancient Rome we have patricians, knights, plebeians, slaves; in the Middle Ages, feudal lords, vassals, guildmasters, journeymen, apprentices, serfs; in almost all of these classes, again, subordinate gradations. The modern bourgeois society that has sprouted from the ruins of feudal society has not done away with class antagonisms. It has but established new classes, new conditions of oppression, new forms of struggle in place of the old ones. Our epoch, the epoch of the bourgeois, possesses, however, this distinct feature: it has simplified class antagonisms. Society as a whole is more and more splitting up into two great hostile camps, into two great classes directly facing each other: Bourgeois and Proletariat." (Communist Manifesto by Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels). The founder of identity politics set into motion a logic, a dynamic, a force and a process of tribal balkanization which would necessarily and inevitably beget a veritable zoo of tribes. What would happen in consequence of Marxism had to happen. Once class was exalted as the primary reality in place of individuals, it was only a matter of time when competing tribes would develop and struggle for power. Thus it happened that in the mid twentieth century a monster with three heads appeared on the scene and commenced a rampage. These three heads were called gender, race and class, and this monster was the final logical, inevitable stage of the cancer of Marxism. This triple headed monster comprised of three Gorgons, whose snake hairs blazed with hatred and violence, declared war on the heritage of the Enlightenment in the name of feminism, black power and the party of the proletariat. These are the children of Marx, the avatars of antiEnlightenment, and the faces of terror which dominate the present day. Listen to the most powerful of the three, which has advanced upon the political and economic centers of the West, reduced cities to wastelands, transformed streets into jungles, and taken over society. Listen to the intersection of two roads, one marked class war and the other marked race war, and hear the advocacy of black proletarian tyranny. Listen to the black Marxist Gorgon. It proclaims that progressive pedagogy is critical pedagogy, which is socalled because it is critical of the Enlightenment values of reason, empirical science and human universalism. It proclaims that facts must be analysed to reveal the racial assumptions underlying them and only facts which advance black power must be accepted. It proclaims that logical reasoning must serve black needs and interests. It proclaims that history must be rewritten from the point of view of blacks. It proclaims that reality is created by group consciousness, feelings and identities. It proclaims that the meanings of words are determined by race, and there are black meanings and white meanings, and only black meanings must be recognized. It proclaims that a progressive society enforces strict ideological conformity and demands worship at the altar of the black will to power. It proclaims that the notion of objectivity is an expression of white supremacy. It proclaims that the notions of care, conscientiousness and performing well on a job are expressions of white supremacy. It proclaims that the use of written words having definite meanings is an expression of white supremacy. It proclaims that the ideal of bodily cleanliness with the use of soap is an expression of white supremacy. It proclaims that speaking and writing grammatically correct English with the correct meanings of words is an expression of white supremacy. It proclaims that the notion of individual rights and freedoms is an expression of white supremacy. It proclaims that the notion of neutral, nonpartisan truth is an expression of white supremacy. It proclaims that the notion of clear, precise thinking is an expression of white supremacy. It proclaims that the notion of rational life and flourishing is an expression of white supremacy. It proclaims that the notions of rational rules, order and control are expressions of white supremacy. It proclaims that the notions of peaceful exchange, promise keeping and contractual relationships are expressions of white supremacy. It proclaims that the notion of rational virtues and values is an expression of white supremacy. It proclaims that since the notion of objective standards of communication is an expression of white supremacy, black speakers of English should not be negatively judged on the basis of bad grammar or the incorrect use of words. It proclaims that a progressive society is a Marxist society and is antiwhite, antimale, anticapitalist, antiheterosexual, denies the existence of sex chromosomes and recognizes a mythical doctrine called transgenderism, and has declared war on able, talented and successful people. It proclaims that black students should be allowed to plagiarize the works of others because the notion of student honesty is an expression of white supremacy. It proclaims that black students should be allowed to hand in their assignments late or to refuse to do them at all because the notion of student responsibility is an expression of white supremacy. It proclaims that the traditions and institutions cherished by civilized people are forms of violence against blacks and must be swept away by a Marxist revolution of black proletarian power: "The fringe lens of critical pedagogy has swallowed today’s academia. Facts are deconstructed, logical reasoning is contorted, historical narratives are rewritten, and causality takes a back seat to the postmodernist project of affirming feelings and identities. Increasingly, words lose meaning and become weaponized for the sake of ideological conformity. Cue the perennial abuse of 'white supremacy.' The phrase’s original meaning of a belief system that white people are inherently superior to other races is now completely coopted with shapeshifting and everexpanding connotations. Objectivity, a sense of urgency, perfectionism, and written words are characteristics of white supremacy culture. Even soap dispensers perpetuate white supremacy. The US academia has now concocted an absurd proposition that speaking and writing proper English is a form of white supremacy. The term is Linguistic White Supremacy or White Language Supremacy, depending on where you look. According to the Conference on College Composition and Communication (CCCC), a membership based professional assocation for 'diverse communicators inside and outside of postsecondary classrooms', 'WLS assists white supremacy by using language to control reality and resources by defining and evaluating people, places, things, reading, writing, rhetoric, pedagogies, and processes in multiple ways that damage our students and our democracy. It imposes a world view that is simultaneously prowhite, cisgender, male, heteronormative, patriarchal, ableist, racist, and capitalist. WLS is, thus, structural and usually a part of the standard operating procedures of classrooms, disciplines, and professions." ('Linguistic White Supremacy': The Left's New Crusade Against The English Language by Wenyuan Wu). A cesspool is an underground container for the temporary storage of sewage. It is a sealed pit made of concrete with a manhole for access and must be pumped out on a regular basis. In the twenty first century, the moral cesspools of society have been broken open by the sledge hammers of black Marxism. Dangerous gases have risen and killed people and places. Pathogenic bacteria of black racism have overrun civilization and rendered it unrecognizable.

COMMUNISTS AND FASCISTS BATTLE IN THE STREETS

A coin is a round, flat object used as a medium of exchange. Coins are standardized in weight, issued by governments and produced in large quantities in a mint. They have obverse and reverse sides, featuring images, numerals or text. From the world of coins has come a popular phrase in the English language. The phrase is two sides of the same coin. It refers to things or ideas which are closely related although they appear different. This phrase has achieved terrifying relevance in the world of politics in the present day. Two movements are on the march which claim to be enemies and alternatives but are in reality echoes of each other and are two sides of the same coin. They enjoy the overwhelming support of the masses and define the political landscape and establishment. They are two varieties and expressions of the number one religion of our time, a religion voted into power in a landslide at the dawn of the twentieth century. This religion is socialism, the religion which proclaims that the individual is not born free and does not belong to himself, but is the rightless property, in body and mind, of the collective. The masses voted this religion into power at the time they did, one hundred years ago, because at this time the West was entering into its declining stage of development. The twentieth century saw the onset of the decline and fall of the West, and like civilizations throughout history, this decline and fall was brought about by a condition of moral degeneration which saw the rejection of reason and freedom. In place of reason and freedom, the masses exalted a mystical entity called the collective, which was held to exist above and apart from the individuals which comprised it, was held to be infinite and unperceivable, and was held to be the universal enslaver of man and the collector of human sacrifices. The Collective, the new God on Earth, was exalted in place of the old time Abrahamic God in Heaven, and put on Earth by the masses in every nation in the West, beginning in the twentieth century. The Collective, its names have changed in different movements, but its essence has remained the same: the view that individuals are not the primary realities and have no right to live or work for themselves. There are two movements in control of the West today which, their proclamations and protestations notwithstanding, represent two faces of the Collective, two expressions of the same inhuman philosophy. The images, numerals and text on each side differ from those on the other side in mere superficial, inessential respects. Listen to them and hear reverberations of the same reality and variations on the same theme. The underlying reality, theme and movement are known specifically as Marxism, the most influential formulation of socialism in history and the most influential world religion after the old time Abrahamic religions. Born in the nineteenth century,

Marxism achieved ascendancy in the twentieth century and dominates the new millennium. Now listen to two faces of the same Marxist coin, two faces fighting each other for power, two faces falsely differentiating themselves from each other, each one accusing the other of promoting tyranny and dictatorship, two mass populist faces confronting a common enemy: liberal democracy. Communism. Listen to one movement promote a triple headed monster called gender, race and class politics. It proclaims that a progressive society values black lives and the lives of nobody else. It proclaims that a progressive society promotes communist propaganda and the communist state. It proclaims that a capitalism is a regime of white privilege. It proclaims that free speech is a regime of aggression and microaggression against Marxism. It proclaims that a progressive society is a bacterial cesspool in which swim illegal aliens and undocumented aliens invading through dissolved borders. It proclaims that a progressive European Union is a Soviet Union which confiscates the wealth of the haves and places it into the hands of the have nots and establishes mass equality. It proclaims that a progressive society promotes a world view and value system founded upon mysticism, which exalts Society above the individual and demands the individual's enslavement. It proclaims that a progressive school does not teach students how to think but what to think and demands that they parrot the Marxist party line and agitate for the following: class war; the dismantling of industry and technology in the name of reducing greenhouse gas emissions; recognition of psychotic individuals who claim that sex chromosomes do not exist and they can change their gender at will and become freaks called transgenders; the transformation of the European Union into a social union and into the Soviet Union; and the abolition of national borders in order to allow savage subpeople to settle in the name of migrant rights. It proclaims that a progressive school requires students who wish to graduate and acquire a diploma to write how they support gender, race and class politics and a Marxist totalitarian society, and are dedicated to fight tooth and nail to overthrow free institutions. It proclaims that a progressive society is a big government, big communist, big feminist, big transgender rights and big black racist society which has indoctrinated the people in Marxist madness and tolled the death bell for liberal democracy: "A populist politician in Ireland has slammed the country’s state exams as containing 'pure propaganda' after pupils were presented with documents promoting Black Lives Matter and concepts like 'White Privilege' and 'Micro Aggressions'. Hermann Kelly, the President of the eurosceptic Irish Freedom Party, has slammed two country wide exams administered in Ireland on Tuesday as containing 'pure propaganda' that is 'worthy only of a communist state.' Pupils taking the Politics and Society subject as part of Ireland’s Leaving Certificate exams—an examination process similar to England’s A Level system, which largely determines what universities a high school leaver is able to go to—were presented documents praising BLM and promoting the concepts of 'White Privilege' and 'Micro Aggressions'. Split into two different levels—higher and ordinary—for the purpose of assessing students of different competencies in the subject, both of the nationwide exams conducted earlier this week contain material pushing concepts frequently associated with the far left. For example, in the ordinary level paper, students were asked to examine two sources and answer questions about 'undocumented' (illegal) migrants. The first source was an infographic titled Live Here, Work Here, Belong Here published by Migrant Rights Center Ireland, containing various statistics regarding illegal immigration in Ireland. The second source was an adapted extract from left wing publication The Journal, which contained suggestions that a near blanket amnesty for illegal migrants currently taking place in the country might not go far enough. Among the host of questions pupils were asked to complete on these documents, pupils were told to 'describe a citizenship project you could undertake, based on organising an event to raise awareness about the plight of undocumented migrants in Ireland.' It proclaims that a progressive society is a tolerant, multicultural society which has opened its gates to layers of dirt wafting across the world peddling Marxism, Islam, drug trafficking and gang war, with the message: Live Here, Work Here, Belong Here. Other notable questions within the paper include Question A: 'Describe two ways that Ireland benefits from being a member of the European Union' and Question 7: 'Using the infographic below discuss issues of inequality in the world today and suggest what can be done to address these issues' The latter of these linked to another graphic referencing the Black Lives Matter movement. Speaking to Breitbart Europe regarding the contentious exams, Brexit campaign veteran and former Irish schoolteacher Hermann Kelly slammed the papers, saying that they were 'clearly not about education and debate but the regurgitation of a worldview and value system formed by cultural Marxism. This is pure propaganda well off the Richter scale, and worthy only of a communist state. All the far left shibboleths are in there. Class warfare, climate action, gender ideology, proEU empire, promass immigration. The most outrageous section is the fawning survey by Migrant Rights Center about people living in Ireland illegally, what it calls the 'undocumented.' The state is using the education system to form the minds of teens to become handmaids of Big Government and compliant repeaters of the 'latest things', be it trans rights or BLM when it arrives over from the USA.' " (State Exams Slammed For Containing 'Propaganda' Pushing BLM, 'White Privilege', 'Micro Aggressions' by Peter Caddle). Fascism. Now listen to another movement derived from Marxism but, like gender, race and class politics, proclaims the primacy of different sorts of tribes from master Marx's original proletarian tribe. Fascism is similar to gender, race and politics, but in an act of false advertising, it proclaims it is anticommunist, while it is in fact not the least bit anticommunist. It proclaims that free trade is wrong and import tariffs are right because consumers have a social responsibility to support their fellow citizens by paying higher prices for domestically produced goods. It proclaims that people who work for big business and multinational corporations are idle, indolent and exploitative, stealing the wealth produced by the class of unskilled animal forms who comprise the proletariat and are the true working class. It proclaims that the corporate oppressors of the working class must be expropriated and their ill gotten power and comfort transferred into the hands of the proletariat. Championing race Marxism, fascism proclaims that people are not individuals who are born free but are born as parts of nations and born into servitude to their nations. It proclaims that freedom is an abstraction which has no basis in reality because people are their race, blood and national tribes and must fight and die for the sake of their physical homeland: "Then he pivoted to politics, and Mr Vance's speech took on a harder edge. He outlined ideas he has spoken about before, but this time, put them in front of a national audience. He railed against what he described as an out of touch elite. He blamed Joe Biden for supporting free trade deals (which were also backed by many Republicans). 'We need a leader who's not in the pocket of big business but answers to the working man,' he said. The former venture capitalist criticized multinational corporations and described a growing wealth gap between 'the few with power and comfort' and 'the rest of us.' It's the kind of rhetoric that might find a comfortable home in the progressive left of the Democratic Party--and has made some business leaders in his own party wary of their new vice presidential nominee. He went on to a full throated defence of American nationalism. He said that America was more than just a good idea, it was a 'group of people with a shared history and a common future. It is, in short, a nation. People don't go and fight and die for abstractions. But they will fight for their home.' " (Analysis: JD Vance Recounts 'Hillbilly' Roots But Shows Hard Political Edge by Antony Zurcher). The twenty first century has been bloodied by battles between two brother camps. They are the obverse and reverse sides of a coin marked collectivism. One camp advocates the slaughter of the individual in the name of a gender, race, class or sexual orientation, and specifically in the name of feminism, transgenderism, gays, lesbians, blacks and the proletariat, while the other camp advocates the slaughter of the individual in the name of a race, a nation and a homeland. Both camps are variants of Marxism. Both camps are left wing insofar as they demand that individuals give up their freedom for the sake of a tribe. These left wing brother camps have been battling each other for a century, and in their first engagement in the 1920s, the hammer and sickle of one camp and the swastika of the other camp were the signs of the totalitarian conquest of man. In the twentieth century, these camps are on the march and have pushed civilization into extinction.

RED UNION HIRES MUSSOLINI

Dozens of people raised their arms in the fascist salute and shouted a fascist chant during ceremonies Sunday to honor Italian dictator Benito Mussolini on the 79th anniversary of his execution. Dressed in black, the neofascist supporters marched through northern Italian towns where Mussolini was arrested and executed at the end of World War II, and also in Predappio, Mussolini's birthplace and final resting place. Mussolini was stopped by antifascist partisans in Dongo, on the shores of Lake Como, on April 27, 1945, as he tried to escape with his lover, Clara Petacci, following the Allied liberation of Italy. On Sunday, a group of neofascists marched through Dongo and placed 15 roses in the lake in memory of the ministers and officials from the Mussolini government who were killed there, according to video of the event by LaPresse news agency. The partisans executed Mussolini and Petacci the following day in the nearby lakeside town of Mezzegra-Giulino, where commemorations were also held Sunday. After a rendition of Taps, the leader of the commemorations shouted Comrade Benito Mussolini!, and the crowd responded with a stiff armed fascist salute and chant of present! (In Italy, Fascist Salute On Display On Anniversary Of Mussolini's Execution, Associated Press, April 28, 2024). Nine thousand kilometers away from Italy and seventy nine years after partisans killed Mussolini, the Duce has risen from his grave and returned to mentor a devoted follower. He now inhabits her soul and advises her on how to agitate the masses. One night she reached out to him, dreamed about him, sought to channel him, and moments later he reappeared on the street outside her house, shrouded in darkness. She was at her window and he told her from the street to do exactly as he said and if she did, she would achieve great power and success. He told her to shout as he shouted, to chant as he chanted, to cry out as he cried out, to employ melodrama as he employed melodrama, to gesticulate wildly as he gesticulated wildly, to pander to the masses as he pandered to the masses, to merge with the mob as he merged with the mob, and to throw the raw meat of hatred and rage to the beasts of the nation as he did, and she would lead the movement he led less than a century before. She came out onto the street to meet him. One Becky Pringle, president of the National Education Association, the oldest teachers' union in America, founded in 1857, and the largest labor union in the nation, whose three million members are comprised of primary school, secondary school and university teachers, came out to greet her mentor. He emerged from the shadows to greet her. She swooned in admiration and adoration, and when she recovered and regained her composure, she was ready to venture forth into battle and set the scum of the nation on fire, just as her beloved mentor had done. Her venue was the annual assembly of the NEA, held on July 4-7, 2024 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Shouting, gesticulating, merging, feeding and pandering to the mob as she had been taught to do by the late, great master of mob politics who had taken a special interest in her, she delivered a rousing stemwinder of a speech which echoed throughout the city. Shock waves coursed through the Independence National Historical Park. They smashed the Liberty Bell to pieces. In the wake of her fury, this iconic symbol of American freedom lay in ruins, a sign of the ruination of the nation and the ruination of the West before an onslaught of Marxist communists and fascists appearing at the twilight stage of civilization. Listen to Becky Pringle, in her earthly guise, sixty eight years old, recipient of a Bachelor's Degree in Science from the University of Pittsburgh, and a Master's Degree in Education from Pennsylvania State University, and a secondary school physics teacher for twenty eight years in the Susquehanna Township School District. Listen to Becky Pringle, in her essence and soul, a resurrection of the leader of the National Fascist Party, the prime minister of Italy, and the Duce of Italian fascism who terrorized his nation from 1922 to 1943. Listen to her. She proclaims that a progressive society is a transgender society which denies the existence of sex chromosomes and promotes the myth that gender can be changed by human action or belief and psychotic individuals who identify as members of the opposite sex are in fact members of the opposite sex. She proclaims that a progressive society encourages psychotic children who claim they are members of the opposite sex to undergo surgical mutilation and hormonal poisoning in obedience to their delusions. She proclaims that a progressive society rejects liberal politics and promotes gay politics and lesbian politics in its place. She proclaims that a progressive society promotes affirmative action policies which discriminate on the basis of race and gender and discriminate against white males in the name of equity and inclusion. She proclaims that a progressive society is a racist, fascist, black power society. She proclaims that the movement which supports American constitutional government and reject the policies of the Marxist gender, race and class establishment, the movement seeking to make America free again whose national leader is Donald Trump, is tyrannical, deceitful and corrupt. She proclaims that schools must be transformed into propaganda towers broadcasting slogans of black power and proletarian power in the name of racial and social justice. She proclaims that a progressive society is a left wing activist society agitating for communist and gay revolution. She proclaims that a progressive society has organized blacks, nonwhites and the poor to seize power and overthrow liberal democracy. She proclaims that a progressive society has established communism in the name of democracy. She proclaims that a progressive society exalts the government and deprives parents of their right to raise their children as they deem fit. She proclaims that a progressive school has taken over the minds of its students and injected them with the red ink of gender, race and class religions. She proclaims that a progressive society is a totalitarian society which has achieved victory over the ideas of the Enlightenment. She proclaims that a progressive school does not seek to educate children but to indoctrinate them in the tenets of Marxist tribal politics. She proclaims that a progressive school is a radical school called Students for a Democratic Society and agitates for communism. She proclaims that a progressive society is a Me Too movement which seeks to lock up the male population on charges of sexual assault, charges sustained without eyewitness corroboration, physical evidence, due process of law or justice and fairness of any kind. She proclaims that a progressive school is a racist jungle which hires people of color as teachers and only people of color. She proclaims that a progressive society forces whites to state publicly that all whites are racists oppressors of blacks and capitalism is a regime of white supremacy, and to surrender all their wealth to blacks as reparations for white capitalist oppression, and condemns whites who refuse to do so as voices of white fragility and puts them in jail. She proclaims that a progressive society is a Marxist society, an old left society, a new left society, a confrontational society, a subversive society, a social justice society, a critical race theory society, a Frankfurt school society and a Saul Alinsky society which criticizes the ideas of the Enlightenment, worships at the altars of tribal power, the altars of black power, feminist power and proletarian power, invades neighborhoods, homes, families, schools, offices and governments, and leads a world revolution to destroy civilization: "At the annual assembly of the National Education Association (NEA) in Philadelphia last weekend, President Becky Pringle addressed representatives of the three million member labor union with a bombastic speech that sparked social media comparisons to Italian fascist dictator Benito Mussolini. In her heavily political speech, Pringle raised such progressive issues as LGBTQ rights, equity and inclusion. She shouted about the union having 'worked hard to rid ourselves of a tyrannical, deceitful, and corrupt [Trump] White House,' about resisting any 'scheme' such as school vouchers to 'drain resources from our beloved public schools,' about fighting nonexistent 'book banning' in Florida, and about 'transforming' the American educational system 'into something it was never designed to be—a racially and socially just and equitable system that prepares every student, EVERY student, EVERY STUDENT, EVERY ONE!' Declaring forcefully that 'We WILL organize for power!' she referenced the legacies of other left wing activists such as Cesar Chavez and Harvey Milk, then closed in a crescendo of screeching about the NEA being 'the ones who help shape the heart of this nation’s hope and dreams! We are the ones who hold steadfast to the belief in the plausibility of the possible! We are the heirs of all who did this work before us! We must keep going! NEA delegates, we can do this work! We must do this work!' 'Keep going, NEA, to preserve our democracy! We must win all the things,' Pringle continued to yell as she whacked the podium and waved her hands aloft. 'Our students are depending on us to win all the things,' she continued, while chanting ecstatically, 'All the things! All the things! All the things!' 'We are the NEA!' she shrieked repeatedly. Pringle's completely uncorked dramatics prompted widespread online mockery and comparisons to an episode of NBC's hit comedy The Office in which intense Dwight Schrute delivered an equally histrionic speech at a sales convention, reportedly modeled in the style of Mussolini. 'These power hungry control freaks think they own your kids. They're in a cult that worships government and detests parents,' school choice activist Corey DeAngelis told Fox News. 'It's time to defund teachers unions and allow the money to follow the child. Becky Pringle pulled a Dwight Schrute. She is off the rails and desperate to maintain control over the minds of other people's children.' " (NEA Mussolini Demands 'All The Things' In Unhinged Speech by Mark Tapson). Schools are considered critical facilities in society and in the event of a power blackout are given special emergency materials and supplies, such as water, food, oxygen tanks and first aid kits. Proclaiming that liberal democracy equals institutional racism, sexism and oppression of the poor, Becky Pringle's National Education Association has shut down the moral currents into America's schools.

TRIBES OVERRUN CIVILIZATION

A tribe is a social division in a primitive society consisting of people linked by religious, economic, racial or ethnic ties. Tribes are hallmarks of primitive society because they are based on the exaltation of groups above individuals. The hallmark of civilization is the rejection of tribes and the concern for individual rights. Civilized people affirm that which reason, common sense and human sanity have taught them for thousands of years. They affirm that groups as such do not exist and the primary existents are individuals. They affirm that there is no such thing as a group conceived as a mystical entity which exists apart from the individuals which comprise it. They affirm that individuals are not defined in terms of the groups to which they belong and do not owe their existence to these groups, but are independent, self subsisting realities. Among the hallmarks of a civilization in a state of decline is the rise of tribalism born from the rejection of reason, common sense and human sanity. When people reject reason, they project the existence of supernatural gods. The Abrahamic religions project a God existing in Heaven, while this worldly religions project supernatural tribes existing on Earth. The first this worldly religion to bow down in worship of tribes was founded in the mid nineteenth century. In the reading room of the British Museum, under the protection of Anglo-Saxon liberty, its right of free speech, and its wall of separation between church and state, Karl Marx brought the Abrahamic God down to Earth and called it the Proletariat. He brought the Devil up from Hell and called it the Bourgeois. The Proletariat is comprised of animal forms appearing as human beings. These forms are held to create all the wealth of mankind through the use of their animal muscles and hands. The Devil, called the Bourgeois, is comprised of people who work with the use of their minds; its exemplars are scientists, inventors, engineers, writers, artists, executives, financiers and entrepreneurs; and this class is held to perform no real work, to be idle and indolent, and to subsist on the wealth it plunders from the Proletariat. The Proletariat and the Bourgeois confront each other as oppressed and oppressor, exploited and exploiter, and the laws of matter and machines have decreed that the Proletariat will rise up and smite down its Bourgeois oppressors and launch a global holocaust to wipe out the Bourgeois people of the mind. In the reading room of the British Museum, Marx planned and promoted a war by the mythical Proletariat he invented to wipe out the Anglo-Saxon liberty which had taken him under its wing and allowed him to broadcast unharmed his brand of incendiary hate speech, and to establish in its place a fearsome, Proletarian, totalitarian tyranny. In the mid nineteenth century, Marx founded identity politics to overthrow the liberal democracy which he despised. His religion assumed a life of its own and developed in accordance with its own inner logic and dynamic. It achieved the status of dominant religion in the twentieth century, and in this time, produced a plethora of new tribes. All emanating from the original Marxist source and all advocating, in Marxist fashion, tribal war, revolution and extermination, these neoMarxist tribes advanced across the West and overran it, and in the twenty first century, they have pushed the West into extinction. Look at today's Marxist dominated political landscape and see herds and gangs in control of the Earth, chanting, sloganeering, demanding and agitating for the destruction of reason, science and human freedom. Listen to their primitive noises and hear the onrushing waves of civilizational death. Listen to Marx's children and hear the loud, unpleasant racket of moral delinquents. Invading from the sewers, streets and lowest strata of society, they proclaim that a progressive society rejects the concern for individual rights and enforce the tenets of gender, race and class identity politics. They proclaim that a progressive anthropology rejects the study of society regarded as a collection of individuals, and is the study of mystical tribes of blacks, latinos, women, queers and indigenous savages. They proclaim that progressive anthropology is a political, religious, ideological movement demanding that America be destroyed and its land surrendered to native Indians, in the name of repatriation, and its citizens beheaded by Indian tomahawks. They proclaim that progressive anthropology exalts Indian mysticism and creation myths above the theories of empirical science. They proclaim that a progressive society is a postEnlightenment society which rejects the notion of truth and seeks to deny knowledge in order to make room for faith. They proclaim that a progressive society rejects the existence of DNA and sex chromosomes and promotes the religion that gender can be changed by human action or belief, that gender can be indeterminate, nonbinary and nonbiological, and individuals can be two genders at one and the same time or be no gender at all. They proclaim that the story of capitalism is the story victimhood and oppression of women, nonwhites and the poor at the hands of white male plutocrats, and nobody can be allowed to challenge this Marxist narrative. They proclaim that a progressive society is an affirmative action society which gives preferential treatment to gays, lesbians, people of color and people who pretend to be members of the opposite sex, in the name of achieving tolerance and inclusion. They proclaim that people who oppose transgenderism, and expose socalled transgenders as confused, delusional, disturbed and psychotic, must be suppressed on the grounds that they are guilty of transphobia. They proclaim that science must be decolonized and deprived of all empirical, rational, objective basis. They proclaim that reality is a tribal construct and the past itself may be rewritten in accordance with tribal needs and interests They proclaim that reality is that which is viewed through the lenses of tribes and does not exist as an independent physical world. They proclaim that there is no such thing as universal science or objective reality and there are as many sciences and realities as there are tribes. There is a black reality, a feminist reality, a queer reality,an indigenous reality and a transgender reality; a science to promote black interests, feminist interests, queer interests, indigenous interests and transgender interests; and no particular science or reality may be held to be more valid or correct than any other or be privileged over any other. They proclaim that a progressive society is a cancel society run by activists for tribal identity who have outlawed free speech and liberal democracy forever: "Today, anthropologists have abandoned their desire to understand others, and identity politics activists have hijacked the field. This can be clearly seen in the many identify groups, which I call neotribes, present in anthropological associations, such as the American Anthropological Association, the Society for American Archaeology, and the American Association for Biological Anthropology. Consider, for example, the following, all of which are now present in the discipline: Women in Archaeology Interest Group; Biological Anthropology Women's Mentoring Network; Association for Queer Anthropology; Queer Archaeology Interest Group; Association of Latina/o and Latinx Anthropologists; Association of Indigenous Anthropologists; Association of Black Anthropologists. Across the pond, the British Association for Biological Anthropology and Osteoarchaeology lists 'Black Archaeology Organizations' that include: Decolonize British Archaeology; The Society of Black Archaeologists; Academics for Black Lives; Aspire Black Suffolk CIC. I wasn't aware of this neotribal takeover until 2020, when my book (coauthored with James W. Springer), Repatriation And Erasing The Past, came out. The book focused on the problem of anthropologists losing skeletal collections to repatriation ideology and laws. Repatriation ideology is 'any ideology, political movement, or law that attempts to control anthropological research by giving control over that research to contemporary American Indian communities.' It exists because of a postmodern agenda that focuses on the perceived victimhood status of a given narrator, rather than on whether the narration is accurate. Postmodernists, after all, do not accept the concept of objectivity or truth. Since the publication of Repatriation And Erasing The Past, I have been on the receiving end of multiple cancellation attempts, including one to try to depublish the book itself. Another one occurred over a talk I gave to the Society for American Archaeology that questioned the validity of repatriating collections based on indigenous creation myths (rather than on scientific evidence). More recently, the talk I had planned to give to the American Anthropological Association on the validity of the sex binary was canceled, as well, as was the entire panel including four other anthropologists who assert that sex is binary, biological, and a necessary component in understanding human nature, culture, and behavior. I wrote about these cancelations in my latest book: On The Warpath: My Battles With Indians, Pretendians And Woke Warriors. Throughout each attempt to cancel me, the aforementioned neotribes reared their ugly heads. These neotribes were upset because I had dared to question the validity of victims' narratives. If one victimhood narrative is questioned, could the neotribes' other narratives—all of which are based on identity politics and victimhood status—be questioned, as well? And so the cancelations rolled in. The British Association for Biological Anthropology and Osteoarchaeology wrote a letter to 'encourage the University of Florida Press to withdraw from sale and digital access Repatriation And Erasing The Past and hoped 'that the Press [would] act, and use this moment to highlight the work of our BIPOC [black, indigenous, people of color] colleagues.' " (The Neo Tribes Of Anthropology by Elizabeth Weiss). Time: 300 AD to 600 AD. Place: the Roman Empire. A civilization in a state of decline, having rejected pagan reason, is under attack by a migration, invasion and settlement of barbarian tribes. A rain of ruin from Franks, Goths, Alemanni, Lombards, Alans, Huns, Slavs, Avars, Bulgars and Magyars, together with Christian subversives peddling a mystical faith, have rendered civilization unrecognizable. In the twenty first century, the wheel of history has made a full revolution and resurrected the nightmare of tribalism and religion, born of antitreason, in the declining stages of the West.

PYROMANIA

On October 8, 1871, at 8:30 PM, in the city of Chicago, in a barn belonging to Patrick and Catherine O'Leary, a cow knocked over a lantern. This small accident instigated a conflagration the likes of America had never seen before. The ensuing Great Chicago Fire raged for the next two days. It killed 300 people, destroyed nine square kilometers of the city, reduced 17,000 structures to ashes, left 100,000 residents homeless, caused five billion dollars in damages in current dollars, and reduced the capital of the steel frame skyscraper and the City Beautiful movement in the nineteenth century to a wasteland. Since that fateful event, Chicago has been no stranger to catastrophic fires, and has played host to the deadliest and most famous arsonist in the nation's history. His fires are raging across the city and across the nation and have fueled the fires burning down the West today. He did not fit the stereotype of an arsonist. He projected an academic demeanor, wearing tweed suits and thick, horn rimmed glasses. But he was a killer like no other. He was a community organizer for communism and his fuel for arson, the most widely cited fuel for arson in the literature of the nation, was called Rules For Radicals. Listen to a Chicagoan, one Saul David Alinsky. He was born in the city on January 30, 1909 and died on June 12, 1971. He held a Bachelor of Philosophy degree from the University of Chicago. He worked at the Institute for Juvenile Research at the University of Illinois at Chicago, in which he proclaimed that capitalism is a regime of mass unemployment, discrimination against blacks and shanty towns for the poor, and is the leading cause of juvenile crime and delinquency. During the Spanish Civil War, he raised funds for the International Brigades, soldiers organized by the Communist International to defend the communist Popular Front. He agitated for communism among southern sharecroppers. He agitated for communism at the Newspaper Guild. He agitated for communism at the Congress of Industrial Organizations. He organized communists among the poor in the Back of the Yards section of the city. He established the Industrial Areas Foundation in the city, which expanded community organizing and trained organizers for communism throughout the nation and the world. From its headquarters in the city, it established branches in twenty one American states plus Canada, Britain and Germany. He established the Citizens' Action Program in the city, which agitated for communism among the professional and middle classes. In 1971, he detonated a bomb whose fires spread far and wide and have been raging ever since. They have burned down city after city across the West and reduced free institutions to smoke and ashes. This fire bomb was his magnum opus. Listen to the roaring of its flames. They proclaim that capitalism is a regime ruled by the haves which oppresses and exploits the have nots. They proclaim that a progressive society takes wealth away from those who have produced it and places it into the hands of those who have not. They proclaim that a communist society has realized the dreams of the oppressed to achieve equality, justice, peace, cooperation, robust health, high education and meaning in life. They proclaim that a progressive society is a mass organization which has seized power from the institutions and constitutions of freedom. They proclaim that a progressive society is an enslaved society which alone allows people to live in freedom, dignity and honor: "What follows is for those who want to change the world from what it is to what they believe it should be. The Prince was written by Machiavelli for the Haves on how to hold power. Rules For Radicals is written for the Have Nots on how to take it away. In this book we are concerned with how to create mass organizations to seize power and give it to the people; to realize the democratic dream of equality, justice, peace, cooperation, equal and full opportunities for education, full and useful employment, health, and the creation of those circumstances in which man can have the chance to live by values that give meaning to life. We are talking about a mass power organization which will change the world into a place where all men and women walk erect, in the spirit of that credo of the Spanish Civil War, 'Better to die on your feet than to live on your knees.' This means revolution." (Rules For Radicals by Saul Alinsky). Listen to the roaring of the flames. They proclaim that capitalism is a society created by and for the oppressive class of haves and must be overthrown by violent change to establish communism. They proclaim that a progressive society affirms the right of the oppressed to revolt against capitalism, the duty of the oppressed to revolt against capitalism, and teaches and trains the oppressed on the ways to do so: "All societies discourage and penalize ideas and writings that threaten the ruling status quo. It is understandable, therefore, that the literature of a Have society is a veritable desert whenever we look for writings on social change. Once the American Revolution was done with, we can find very little besides the right of revolution that is laid down in the Declaration of Independence as a fundamental right; seventy three years later Thoreau's brief essay on The Duty of Civil Disobedience; followed by Lincoln's reaffirmation of the revolutionary right in 1861. There are many phrases extolling the sacredness of revolution—that is, revolutions of the past. Our enthusiasm for the sacred right of revolution is increased and enhanced with the passage of time. The older the revolution, the more it recedes into history, the more sacred it becomes. Except for Thoreau's limited remarks, our society has given us few words of advice, few suggestions of how to fertilize social change." (Rules For Radicals by Saul Alinsky). Listen to the roaring of the flames. They proclaim that a progressive society knows how to organize for and deploy power to establish communism. They proclaim that a progressive society establishes communism in the name of achieving an equitable distribution of wealth. They proclaim that a progressive society seeks to eradicate talented and successful people with a spear marked envy and hatred. They proclaim that there is no such thing as objective truth; truth is a weapon of political partisanship and an expression of class interests; and a progressive society seeks to enforce the principles, ideology and dogma of communism: "My aim here is to suggest how to organize for power: how to get it and to use it. I will argue that the failure to use power for a more equitable distribution of the means of life for all people signals the end of the revolution and the start of the counterrevolution. Revolution has always advanced with an ideological spear just as the status quo has inscribed its ideology upon its shield. All of life is partisan. There is no dispassionate objectivity. The revolutionary ideology is not confined to a specific limited formula. It is a series of general principles, rooted in Lincoln's May 19, 1856, statement: 'Be not deceived: Revolutions do not go backward.' " (Rules For Radicals by Saul Alinsky). Listen to the roaring of the flames. They proclaim that capitalism is a regime of mass slums, mass impoverishment, mass starvation wages, mass disease, mass hopelessness, mass immiseration and racial discrimination. They proclaim that communism is the crowning jewel of democracy, blazing with the fires of popular liberation. They proclaim that capitalism is a scourge on the people and a scar and blight on the land. They proclaim that capitalism is a corporate structure of war and oppression directed against the working class and must be overthrown by a revolution of radicals and militants marching under the banners of the Soviet Red Star: "In Chicago the people of Upton Sinclair's Jungle, then the worst slum in America, crushed by starvation wages when they worked, demoralized, diseased, living in rotting shacks, were organized. Their banners proclaimed equality for all races, job security, and a decent life for all. With their power they fought and won. Today, as part of the middle class, they are also part of our racist, discriminatory culture. The Tennessee Valley Authority was one of the prize jewels in the democratic crown. Visitors came from every part of the world to see, admire, and study this physical and social achievement of a free society. Today it is the scourge of the Cumberland Mountains, strip mining for coal and wreaking havoc on the countryside. The CIO was the militant champion of America's workers. In its ranks, directly and indirectly, were all of America's radicals; they fought the corporate structure of the nation and won. Today, merged with the AFL, it is an entrenched member of the establishment and its leader supports the war in Vietnam." (Rules For Radicals by Saul Alinsky). Listen to the roaring of the flames. They proclaim that capitalism is regime in which the haves have expropriated the wealth produced by the working class, which has been reduced to a state of slavery, unemployment, homelessness, disease, ignorance, impoverishment and stultification. They proclaim that capitalism is a regime in which the robber baron haves enjoy unlimited power, money, food, security and luxury on the bloodied backs of the working class. They proclaim that capitalism is a regime which discriminates against blacks and the poor and chains them together in the deep underground caves of hopelessness, despair, resignation and subhuman existence. They proclaim that a progressive society has ignited the petrol of envy and discontent overflowing in the souls of the animal classes, fanned the flames into a global conflagration, raised the temperature in homes, families, neighborhoods, schools and offices into a fever and delirium, and burned down civilization: "The setting for the drama of change has never varied. Mankind has been and is divided into three parts: the Haves, the Have Nots, and the Have a Little, Want Mores. On top are the Haves with power, money, food, security and luxury. They suffocate in their surpluses while the Have Nots starve. Numerically the Haves have always been the fewest. The Haves want to keep things as they are and are opposed to change. Thermopolitically they are cold and determined to freeze the status quo. On the bottom are the world's Have Nots. On the world scene they are by far the greatest in numbers. They are chained together by the common misery of poverty, rotten housing, disease, ignorance, political impotence, and despair; when they are employed their jobs pay the least and they are deprived in all areas basic to human growth. Caged by color, physical or political, they are barred from an opportunity to represent themselves in the politics of life. The Haves want to keep; the Have Nots want to get. Thermopolitically they are a mass of cold ashes of resignation and fatalism, but inside there are glowing embers of hope which can be fanned by the building of means of obtaining power. Once the fever begins the flame will follow. They have nowhere to go but up." (Rules For Radicals by Saul Alinsky). Pyromania is an impulse control disorder in which an individual deliberately starts fires in order to achieve arousal, gratification and release from tension. When a pyromaniac is around fires, he experiences high interest, fascination, pleasure and relief. Teaching the masses of the disaffected how to run a movement of confrontation, community organizing and civilization destruction, Saul Alinsky achieved his tensional release as he set the West on fire.

DIVERSITY HIRE BELLY DOWN WITH TRUMP SHOOTER

A synonym is a word which means the same as another word in a given language. An abundance of synonyms is a sign of a rich language. Having the largest vocabulary of any language in the world, English has the largest number of synonyms. English abounds in synonyms, drawn from its multifarious loanwords: thought, notion and idea; ring, round and circle; happy, delighted and joyful The past half century has seen the emergence of a body of synonyms sinister and foreboding, signposts to a practice condemned by civilized people for thousands of years. These are synonyms for the reversion of society to a primitive jungle of tribes. Rejecting the traditions and institutions of liberal democracy, these are synonyms for policies of racism and sexism which have reduced individuals to members of groups as they have abolished meritocracy. The synonyms are affirmative action and diversity, equity and inclusion. Denying the primacy of individuals and the reality of flesh and blood human existence, these policies have reduced individuals to phantom abstractions as they have institutionalized unfairness and injustice. On July 13, 2024 at 6:11 PM, at a campaign rally for Donald Trump near Butler, Pennsylvania, the dark reality of these words rained down a storm of death, mayhem and attempted assassination and showed the nation in dramatic terms the character of these policies. Their proponents proclaim that discrimination on the basis of race and sex is justifiable affirmative action. They proclaim that such discrimination is about achieving diversity, inclusion, and the highest form of fairness and equity. They reject the liberal ideal of a race blind, gender blind society and advocate discrimination against whites and males as an imperative of social justice. On July 13, 2024 at 6:11 PM, at the Butler Farm Show Grounds, the new order of race and gender politics reared its ugly head and blasted out death and destruction from the barrel of a rifle. The rifle was wielded by one Thomas Matthew Crookes, who was enabled in his efforts by one Kimberly Cheatle. Crookes was a twenty year old American who killed one person and injured three others, including Donald Trump, in an assassination attempt on Trump. Kimberly Cheatle is the twenty seventh director of the United States Secret Service, in office since September 2022. Cheatle was hired by Joe Biden as part of his official policy of discriminating against white males at the workplace. Listen to Joe Biden defend race and gender discrimination in the name of achieving diversity, equity, inclusion and accessibility. In the name of achieving civil rights, racial justice, equal opportunity and equal treatment under the law. In the name of achieving a workforce which reflects the diversity of the American people. In the name of achieving a workforce drawn from all segments of society. In the name of achieving diverse perspectives at the workplace. In the name of achieving Marxist identity politics and a new tribalist nation: "By the authority vested in me as President by the Constitution and the laws of the United States of America, and in order to strengthen the Federal workforce by promoting diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility, it is hereby ordered as follows: Section 1. Policy. On my first day in office, I signed Executive Order 13985 (Advancing Racial Equity and Support for Underserved Communities Through the Federal Government), which established that affirmatively advancing equity, civil rights, racial justice, and equal opportunity is the responsibility of the whole of our Government. To further advance equity within the Federal Government, this order establishes that it is the policy of my Administration to cultivate a workforce that draws from the full diversity of the Nation. As the Nation’s largest employer, the Federal Government must be a model for diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility, where all employees are treated with dignity and respect. Accordingly, the Federal Government must strengthen its ability to recruit, hire, develop, promote, and retain our Nation’s talent and remove barriers to equal opportunity. It must also provide resources and opportunities to strengthen and advance diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility across the Federal Government. The Federal Government should have a workforce that reflects the diversity of the American people. A growing body of evidence demonstrates that diverse, equitable, inclusive, and accessible workplaces yield higher performing organizations. Federal merit system principles include that the Federal Government's recruitment policies should 'endeavor to achieve a work force from all segments of society' and that 'all employees and applicants for employment should receive fair and equitable treatment in all aspects of personnel management.' As set forth in Executive Order 13583 of August 18, 2011 (Establishing a Coordinated Government-Wide Initiative to Promote Diversity and Inclusion in the Federal Workforce), the Presidential Memorandum of October 5, 2016 (Promoting Diversity and Inclusion in the National Security Workforce), Executive Order 13988 of January 20, 2021 (Preventing and Combating Discrimination on the Basis of Gender Identity or Sexual Orientation), the National Security Memorandum of February 4, 2021 (Revitalizing America's Foreign Policy and National Security Workforce, Institutions, and Partnerships), and Executive Order 14020 of March 8, 2021 (Establishment of the White House Gender Policy Council), the Federal Government is at its best when drawing upon all parts of society, our greatest accomplishments are achieved when diverse perspectives are brought to bear to overcome our greatest challenges, and all persons should receive equal treatment under the law. This order reaffirms support for, and builds upon, the procedures established by Executive Orders 13583, 13988, and 14020, the Presidential Memorandum on Promoting Diversity and Inclusion in the National Security Workforce, and the National Security Memorandum on Revitalizing America's Foreign Policy and National Security Workforce, Institutions, and Partnerships. This order establishes that diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility are priorities for my Administration and benefit the entire Federal Government and the Nation, and establishes additional procedures to advance these priorities across the Federal workforce" (Executive Order On Diversity, Equity, Inclusion, And Accessibility In The Federal Workforce, June 25, 2021). Now look at the bitter harvest reaped by the nation from the seeds of identity politics. Look at the wages the majority has earned from its sins. Look at the new race and gender politics championed by Joe Biden's Secret Service Director Kimberly Cheatle, hired because she is a woman, and a picture of incompetence whose negligence made an innocent person die and inflicted a head injury on Trump. Kimberly Cheatle, preoccupied with race and gender politics to the point of hiring unqualified female personnel to protect public officials: "In this administration, we find many DEI hires who are completely incompetent, mixed with arrogance and entitlement. See Mayor Pete Buttigieg, Rachel Levine and Sam Brinton. I'm sure there are thousands more hidden in government offices, cubicles and even heading government agencies. But now we get to a special case: Secret Service Director Kimberly Cheatle. Is she just another incompetent government DEI hire? Well, in a word, YES. Kimberly Cheatle was clearly a DEI hire. As a matter of fact, guess what story is missing in the media? I haven't seen a word about this. On May 9, a Bloomberg News reporter tweeted about the highly unusual situation of a petition signed openly by many members of the Secret Service demanding Cheatle be fired because she is obsessed with DEI, and therefore putting lives at risk. That was just over 60 days before President Trump came 1/4 inch away from death." (DEI Dumb: Something Smells Rotten At The Secret Service by Wayne Allan Root). Look at Kimberly Cheatle, focused on hiring diverse candidates and not on hiring qualified candidates. Focused on giving women an opportunity to protect the president regardless of whether they are able to protect the president. Focused on enforcing gender quotas at the workplace and sacrificing meritocracy upon the altar of tribal politics and ideology. Setting a goal of having women comprise thirty percent of the workforce, she has endangered the security of the president, placed a bullseye on democracy, and opened fire: "In a CBS News interview, Cheatle underscored the significance of attracting diverse candidates and ensuring opportunities for all, with a particular focus on women. The Secret Service has set a goal for women to comprise 30 percent of its recruits by 2030. 'I'm very conscious as I sit in this chair now, of making sure that we need to attract diverse candidates and ensure that we are developing and giving opportunities to everybody in our workforce, and particularly women,' Cheatle said." (Kimberly Cheatle's Net Worth And Goal To Hire 30% More Females For Secret Service by 2030 by Vinay Patel). Look at Kimberly Cheatle, a figure who rose to lead the Secret Service by the grace of Joe Biden and his Marxist new order of race and gender politics. Hired because she is a woman and not because she is qualified, she and her fellow diversity hires allowed Trump to remain on stage after his would be assassin was observed brandishing a weapon. She and her fellow diversity hires put on a display of pseudoservice which aroused the fear, shock and condemation of the nation: "Representative Tim Burchett (R-TN) told President Joe Biden's Secret Service Director Kimberly Cheatle, 'You are a DEI horror story' during Monday's House Oversight Committee hearing on the attempted assassination of former President Donald Trump. 'You said, 'The buck stops with me,' and I agree. I don't think you should resign; I think you should be fired. Ma'am, you are a DEI horror story,' Burchett said. 'I have told my daughter multiple times—my wife and my daughter—we talk to her all the time about how she's going to succeed in life,' Burchett added. 'She'll succeed in life by achieving. Ma'am, you have not achieved today; you have let the American public down. If it was up to me, you'd be gone.' Burchett's remarks came after he asked Cheatle a series of questions that she failed to answer. 'Why was President Trump allowed on stage ten minutes after the Secret Service spotted the suspicious individual?' he asked. 'That seems, to me, to be the worst thing of all—of all the breakdown in all this, communication, all the BS you've been feeding us here today.' " (Representative Tim Burchett To Secret Service Director Kimberly Cheatle: 'You Are A DEI Horror Story' by Alana Mastrangelo). As Thomas Matthew Crookes climbed atop a building 135 meters away from Donald Trump, as he fired his AR 15 rifle and shot Trump in the right ear, and shot three members of the audience, killing one of them, he had an enabler by his side. She was gender politics. She was the slow response from female agents after the shooting, agents hired because they were female. She was Joe Biden's and the Secret Service's diversity hiring policies. She was Kimberly Cheatle, and together with Thomas Matthew Crookes, she tried to assassinate a nation.

ESTABLISHMENT GAME WARDENS CAPTURE TRUMP

Hunting is the practice of seeking, pursuing, capturing and killing wild animals. The reasons for hunting are to obtain meat for sustenance, to enjoy recreation, to conduct scientific research, to perform taxidermy, and to eliminate enemies and predators. The practice of hunting arose millions of years ago and is embedded in cultures throughout the world, and was once the mainstay of human economies, alongside forestry, agriculture and fishery. In the twenty first century, the American people and establishment have launched a hunt without precedent in the history of the nation. They have launched a hunt to eliminate a political figure they have condemned as an enemy and predator. This figure stands in the political center in a nation which has rejected the center and veered into the radical left. As America has moved steadily to the left over the past one hundred years, peddling its descent into communism under the guise of progressivism, the center has shifted along with it, because the center position is purely relational and is inherently meaningless. In the twenty first century, the term center still stands for a type of freedom, a type of constitutional government and a type of Americanism, and is thus that which the establishment has banned and cursed and is determined to wipe out. This centrist figure has leftist elements in his platform. In addition to supporting the New Deal dispensation and its steady additions over the years, he has voiced support for populist positions which run contrary to free trade and to fighting for an abstraction called freedom independent of national identity or the physical homeland. But Donald Trump, forty fifth president of the United States running for reelection in 2024, still, in his basic centrism, in his unfashionable, minority, maverick position, poses a sufficient threat to the establishment to provoke a campaign of persecution which, in its single minded fury, will not cease until he is dead and destroyed. The campaign against Trump is a campaign of vilification and violence springing out of the playbook of the former communist bloc and is determined, like its predecessor, to eradicate all opposition to its rule. Look at the campaign and see the tactics of a totalitarian movement lower the curtain on freedom in America. See the establishment rig the 2020 presidential election by the FBI suppression of email evidence establishing Joe Biden's global influence peddling operation conducted while he was vice president, evidence contained in Hunter Biden's laptop, coercing social media platforms into censoring news stories. See the establishment condemn the laptop evidence of Joe Biden's selling of his vice presidential office as Russian disinformation. See the establishment condemn Donald Trump as Hitlerian because he opposes the Marxist juggernaut of identity politics. See the establishment condemn Trump as a Russian agent because he opposes Marxist worship at the altar of gender, race and class. See the establishment impeach Trump by votes cast by Marxist Democrats and Republicans. See the establishment illegally put Trump on trial in the Senate when he was a private citizen. See the establishment seek to remove Trump from the ballot for the 2024 election on the basis of a unilateral finding, without due process of law, that Trump had engaged in insurrection. See the establishment arrest, jail and bankrupt Trump for victimless offenses, expired offenses, uncorroborated offenses and undisguised nonoffenses. See the establishment's academics and learned persons condemn Trump as a fascist because he champions the capitalist system. See the establishment transform the FBI, CIA, Department of Justice and Director of National Intelligence into daggers to impale Trump because he champions Enlightenment values, traditions and institutions. See the establishment seek to remove Trump from office by means of a military coup. See the establishment seek to remove Trump from office by the manufacture of dementia from which Joe Biden has been certified to suffer. See the nation's military commanders of land, sea, air and space seek to remove Trump from office. See the nation's military chain of command seek to remove Trump from office. See the nation's armed forces form an alliance with the Chinese People's Liberation Army to remove Trump from office. See the nation's generals and admirals violate the Uniform Code of Military Justice and seek to remove Trump from office. See the nation's top military brass violate their oaths to respect civilian authority and seek to remove Trump from office. See the establishment condemn Trump as a national socialist because he champions science which affirms that gender is fixed immutably by chromosomes and cannot be changed by human action, will or belief. See the establishment condemn Trump as a hate monger because he opposes open borders and mass, unvetted migration of subhuman scum. See the establishment condemn Trump as an apologist for Auschwitz because he champions equal treatment for all without regard to race or gender and rejects affirmative action policies which give preferential treatment to women and nonwhites. See the establishment condemn Trump as a latter day Mussolini because he champions individual rights in place of social justice. See establishment officials perjure themselves in denying or not remembering engaging in illegal acts to remove Trump from office. See the establishment's celebrities, columnists, commentariat and corporate elite publicly demand that Trump be killed. See the Secret Service withdrew protection from Trump and allow a would be assassin to use a drone, a range finder and an AR rifle, and to climb atop a roof 135 meters away from Trump at a campaign rally and open fire, killing one person, injuring three others, including Trump, and blasting through house of American democracy: "Who has most peddled conspiracy allegations the last nine years—all of them false and nearly all of them influencing national elections and public policies? Once a target is constructed as Hitlerian, almost any means necessary to quash that perceived existential threat become justified. And we have seen a lot of them in the last nine years. Russian collusion did not work. Christopher Steele was a fraud. Robert Mueller came up empty. The Russian laptop disinformation was a lie and ruined the reputations of the '51 former intelligence authorities' who sanctioned it. The first Trump impeachment was a strictly partisan vote, activated when Trump lost the House and Mueller had come up empty. Only ten Republicans impeached Trump a second time; the Senate again acquitted then private citizen Trump. Sixteen states, in an unprecedented move, tried in vain to remove Trump from the 2024 ballot. All failed. If they had succeeded, elections as we know them would have ceased to exist. Four prosecutorial teams, local, state, and federal, sought to bankrupt, jail, or render Trump inert during the 2023-2024 campaign cycle. The recent assassination attempts to kill Trump likewise failed. The eerie laxity of the Secret Service and the Biden administration’s long stonewalling to prevent adequate protection for candidates Trump and Robert Kennedy, Jr, will be long examined. Earlier, a number of celebrities, columnists, and rich elites had suggested that the only way to rid the country of Trump was to kill or injure him. The Trump vitriol has not diminished. And the combination of signaling to the crazies that Trump really is Hitler while the Secret Service has demonstrated it cannot protect the expresident and leading current presidential candidate from 20 year old boys with overt drones, range finders, and AR-15s will only encourage other evil would be assassins to continue where the Crooks demon left off. The cover of The New Republic transposed an old German proHitler poster to portray Donald Trump. He stares out with a Hitlerian moustache, amid a supposedly scary black background. Beneath Hitler-Trump, German archaic fraktur fonts blare out in red American Fascism, followed by the subtitle What it would look like—in turn listing left wing professors and pundits as the issue's essayists on Trump the fascist. Aside from the reality that the FBI, CIA, DOJ, and Director of National Intelligence were not weaponized during the Trump administration, as they were under both Obama and Biden, why should we take such essayists seriously? For example, one contributor, Rosa Brooks, warns us about what Trump might do in a second term to warp democracy. But this is the same legal expert who, just 11 days after Trump was inaugurated in 2017, published a Foreign Policy essay titled 3 Ways To Get Rid Of President Trump Before 2020 What followed was a manual on the various ways of how to remove the just inaugurated president—listing three alternatives to the then distant 2020 election: impeachment and conviction, Twenty Fifth Amendment removal, and, barring all that, a military coup: 'The fourth possibility is one that until recently, I would have said was unthinkable in the United States of America: a military coup, or at least a refusal by military leaders to obey certain orders.' Brooks' 2017 essay also proved eerily prescient in retrospect, given that Chairman of the Joint Chiefs General Mark Milley later chose to violate the chain of command and purportedly ordered theater commanders in the field to report directly to him, despite his strictly advisory role, in times of existential national crises to circumvent the commander in chief. Milley also stealthily contacted his communist Chinese military counterpart to assure the head of the People's Liberation Army that he would warn him first should Dr Milley, on his own, diagnose his own president as unhinged and thus any supposedly dangerously warlike presidential order as invalid. In August 2020, retired Lieutenant Colonels John Nagl and Paul Yingling cowrote an op-ed addressed to Milley, warning him that he should use the military to remove Trump, should the military, in its infinite and vast political wisdom, assume that Trump would not accept the verdict of the impending election." (A Decade of Conspiracists? by Victor Davis Hanson). One hundred years ago, civilized people, observing the rising antifreedom movement in America, a movement rising on the wings of mob agitation, asked themselves a question. They asked what the nation would look like if the new totalitarians ever achieved total power. In the new millennium, the answer has arrived in living color. It has arrived in terrifying actuality. In the new millennium, America has been transformed into a communist and fascist jungle which has captured and killed Donald Trump.

"NOW this is the law of the jungle, as old and as true as the sky/And the wolf that shall keep it may prosper, but the wolf that shall break it must die./As the creeper that girdles the tree trunk, the law runs forward and back;/For the strength of the pack is the wolf, and the strength of the wolf is the pack./Wash daily from nose tip to tail tip; drink deeply, but never too deep;/And remember the night is for hunting and forget not the day is for sleep./The jackal may follow the tiger, but, cub, when your whiskers are grown,/remember the wolf is a hunter—go forth and get food of your own./Keep peace with the lords of the jungle, the tiger, the panther, the bear;/And trouble not Hathi the Silent, and mock not the boar in his lair. Thus speaks Rudyard Kipling in his 1865 novel Second Jungle Book. Since the dawn of civilization, the jungle has held a special symbolic meaning. It has been viewed as a symbol of savagery and a metaphor for the condition of a society which inevitably ensues, as surely as night follows day, when people abandon reason. The rule of the wolf, the jackal, the tiger, the panther and the bear, which ever mark the jungle, stands for the rule of brute force and the survival of the strongest which darkens societies on their way down, descending into the abyss. Beginning in the twentieth century, savagery has had a name. The rule of brute force has been packaged in the form of a system. The ideas of violence and lawlessness have held sway in the form of a movement. The rejection of civilization has been peddled in the form of a religion. Voted into power in landslide after landslide, up ballot and down ballot, under tickets stamped progressivism, this system, this movement and this religion are known as Marxism. It is the number one political name, movement, system and religion of our time and has defined the political establishment of the West for the past one hundred years. It is a juggernaut which has spared nothing in its relentless advance. It has felled the mightiest tree and reduced it to a rotted, decayed, wild stump. The most populous city in America with over eight million residents, a global center of finance, commerce, science, technology, arts, fashion, entertainment and media, headquarters of the United Nations and international diplomacy, New York City has been razed to the ground and rendered unrecognizable by the decision of its citizens and the citizens of the West to adopt Marxism as the prevailing orthodoxy. Look at New York City today and see neighborhoods suffocate beneath a blanket of shelters for subhuman migrant scum. See government run migrant shelters bleed the city white. See migrant camps, migrant carts, migrant hotels, migrant pantries and migrant welfare checks, forming a veritable city within a city and a state within a state, spread like a cancer into families, homes, schools and offices. See alarm bells sound in the night warning of a migrant invasion of the continent from a beachhead in the city. See migrant housing projects submerge the city in a sea of raw sewage. See migrant waves of violence place avenues and boulevards in the grip of fear. See the city's working people forced to support migrant communities round the clock. See migrant voices elected in a landslide to fill city hall, the city administration and the mayor's office. See the mayor's migrant plan to place the city under the rule of Islam. See public schools reject liberal education and teach their new student body, migrant children, the ABCs of Islamist revolution. See city councilmen and councilwomen transfer the wealth and resources of the city into the hands of migrant constituencies. See migrants overrun low income, middle income and high income neighborhoods. See migrants gather around the producers of wealth, ready to pounce and plunder. See migrants invade every sector and zip code in the city. See migrants sent by Joe Biden overload, overburden and overwhelm the city. See migrants disguised as refugees and asylum seekers conduct subversive activities in every borough of the city. See migrants transform the city into a permanent theater of war, center of crisis and site of emergency. See migrants accommodated in every corner of every apartment and brownstone in the city. See a city which for decades had stood atop the world as it revolved, pulsing out signals of freedom, reduced to a migrant shanty town unsafe and unviable. See migrants placed everywhere and anywhere, filling the city with dirt and disorder. See migrants fed, housed, clothed and cared for by the city as it descends in a journey into hell. See New Yorkers of every occupation, income level and station of life reduced to rightless vassals of migrant lords. See a migrant expansion in every direction of the city, ugly, untidy and nightmarish, aided and abetted by a Marxist-Islamist axis in control of the nation. See a system of Marxist migrant management, conducted at local, state and federal levels, transform the city into an illegal ballot box stuffed with migrant votes for the Democrat Party. See a terrifying fact confront civilized people throughout the city. It is the fact that migrant women do not bear children but spawn progeny, and spawn them by the billions, and deposit the eggs in every neighborhood and district, there to hatch and rise up and join Allah's Community of the Faithful to destroy civilization: "Low income New Yorkers are sounding the alarm about Mayor Eric Adams (D) placing the majority of migrant shelters in their already impoverished neighborhoods and sucking up resources meant for struggling Americans. A staggering 193 government run migrant shelters are operating in the Big Apple, but none of them are located in the top five zip codes by median income, the New York Post confirmed in a recent report. While Tribeca, Battery Park City, the Financial District, and other parts of Lower Manhattan are completely insulated from the sprawling migrant camps and hotels, Long Island City—He also told the Post that the migrants are taking from the food banks and causing long lines to pick up supplies from local pantries and welfare checks. 'People from the projects don't even get food,' Beauford, 36, said. '[The migrants] come early and tie their little carts up to a gate to hold their spot; then people from the projects show up and are, like, whose carts are these?' According to the Post, 'nearly two dozen shelters are clustered around two public housing projects' in Long Island City. The other large development for poor Long Island City residents is Ravenswood Houses. Beauford is not the only disgruntled resident of Queensbridge, which is the largest housing project on the continent. 'Why are y'all sending them here?' wondered Shawarn Shields, another one of the 7,000 residents. 'Send them to Fifth Avenue! Send them to Park Avenue, but they won't do that.' A neighborhood in the NYC borough of Queens, not to be confused with the suburbs on Long Island, holds 23 of them. With 12 percent of the city's migrant shelters stuffed into just one neighborhood, native residents are calling it unfair. 'The city dropped a bomb on us,' said Danny Beauford, a resident of the Queensbridge Houses public housing project in Long Island City. 'The [migrants] are taking over. They're taking over all the parking with their 8,000 scooters. They're disrespectful—peeing in front of everybody. We do that one time, and we're going to jail for a long time.' He also told the Post that the migrants are taking from the food banks and causing long lines to pick up supplies from local pantries and welfare checks. 'People from the projects don't even get food,' Beauford, 36, said. '[The migrants] come early and tie their little carts up to a gate to hold their spot; then people from the projects show up and are like 'whose carts are these?' According to the Post, 'nearly two dozen shelters are clustered around two public housing projects' in Long Island City. The other large development for poor Long Island City residents is Ravenswood Houses. Beauford is not the only disgruntled resident of Queensbridge, which is the largest housing project on the continent. 'Why are y'all sending them here?' wondered Shawarn Shields, another one of the 7,000 residents. 'Send them to Fifth Avenue! Send them to Park Avenue, but they won't do that.' 'Why are you sending where everyone is already living check to check?' Shields, 56, added. 'They ain't living check to check in Manhattan.' Councilwoman Julie Won (D), who represents the neighborhood, blamed the long lines at food banks on city contracted vendors delivering 'rotten' and 'inedible' food, but acknowledged that resources are being stretched too thin in order to accommodate migrants in her low income district. 'These shelters are being placed in the poorest part of communities,' Won told the Post. '[The Adams administration] needs to spread them out, so you're not hurting communities–especially low income communities.' This echoed an earlier statements she made to the Queens Daily Eagle in April, where she also mentioned the connection between longer food bank lines and the migrant influx: 'They should be evenly distributed, and that's what the mayor says all the time–equal distribution. Clearly the data shows that that is not how this has been distributed at all. As you can tell by the number of shelters that I have in my district, those are all hotels that are our budget hotels that were built with this purpose, and they were able to do it willy nilly without any community consent. I think they're just scrambling to open up shelters anywhere they could get a contract without really thinking about how it's going to impact communities or how you're going to make it equitable, how you're going to resource these communities, if you're going to overburden them." (Report: NYC's Low Income Neighborhoods Overwhelmed By Migrant Shelters by Olivia Rondeau). On Liberty Island stands a copper clad statue 93 meters tall. A gift from the people of France to the people of America, it is a statue of the Roman goddess of Liberty, called Libertas. She holds a torch high above her head and for over a century and a half had lit up the skies of the oppressed throughout the world. This icon of liberty and symbol of welcome of immigrants by sea in search of liberty has been extinguished in the twenty first century. It lies underwater in an ocean of Marxist-Islamist agitation known as New York City.

SPANISH CIVIL WAR: MARXIST STORM CLOUDS RAIN DOWN COMMUNISM AND FASCISM

A rehearsal is an activity which prepares for a performance in the arts. It is a form of practice in the fields of music, theater and dance. Its goal is to ensure perfection, polish and coordination in the final performance of the piece before an audience. The highest type of rehearsal is a dress rehearsal in which the performers wear their actual costumes and use props and backdrops. Commencing on July 17, 1936 and lasting for two years, eight months, two weeks and two days, a dress rehearsal was staged for the worst war in history and for the leading battle of our time. It was staged in Spain and involved two movements which have been vying for power since that time for control over the deceased forms of civilization. They are the number one movements of our time, voted into power in landslide elections by people who have abandoned reason and turned their backs on the legacies of the Enlightenment. They have turned their backs on the values affirmed by civilized people for thousands of years: the values of sanity, science, the evidence of the senses and the rights of man. They have adopted in their place political, religious and ideological movements whose mission is to imprison the mind in a dungeon and enslave all humanity. They are movements of socialism which worship at the altar of a god called the Collective and reject the individual's right to exist. They are movements which seek to subjugate the individual to a group, to chain the individual to group thought and group action, and to reduce the individual to a cog in the machinery of the social organism. They proclaim that the collective and not the individual is the primary reality and standard of value, and the individual only exists insofar as he is a member of the collective and has value and worth only insofar as he serves the collective. Constructing a mystical being called the Collective, held to be unperceivable and to exist apart from the individuals which comprise it, they differ among themselves only with respect to the name of the being to which the individual must be sacrificed. Both movements are derived from Marxism; one is the original version of the system while the other is a variant; and together they have captured the hearts and minds of the masses and launched a pincer movement to overthrow liberal democracy. Adopting Marx's method of social analysis, the method of viewing human affairs through the lens of tribes and not seeing flesh and blood individuals, and adopting Marx's clarion call for tribal war and extermination, these movements battled for power in Spain during the Spanish Civil War. The Spanish engagement was but a prelude to an encore performance given in World War II. The postwar period has seen the West flow with rivers of blood from an internecine conflict between class Marxists and race Marxists, between communists and fascists, and the twenty first century has seen the triumph of these twin monsters upon the ruins of civilization. Seeking to differentiate themselves from the other by means of false advertising, communists and fascists define the cultural and political establishment in every nation of the West today. The communists peddle their poison, their program of slavery, in a vial labeled progressivism, while the fascists peddle their poison, their program of slavery, in vials marked patriotism, nationalism and racial superiority; both movements are united in their rejection of individual rights, in their promotion of identity politics, and in their demand that people surrender their freedom to the state. The first major military confrontation between communists and fascists in the West occurred in the Spanish Civil War. Listen to the commanders of the movements and hear the shape of things to come. The communists called themselves the Republicans, while the fascists called themselves the Nationalists. Listen to the Republicans proclaim that communism liberates people from conservative military forces. Communism is a progressive popular people's front. Communism is the struggle for democracy. Capitalism is a regime of ruthless, fascist dictatorship. Capitalism encounters massive popular resistance. Capitalism is national socialist Germany and fascist Italy. Capitalism equals fascism and is opposed by the people's international brigades and Abraham Lincoln forces of liberation. Capitalism is a regime of rank inequality exploiting and oppressing the poor. Capitalism is an oligarchy of landowners whose wealth has been plundered from the pockets of the poor. Communism means the liberation of the landless, rightless, starving, immiserated working class. Communism means the abolition of ignorance and illiteracy. Communism means modernization and secularization. Communism means true liberalism. Communism means the liberation of the people from the yoke of the army and the Catholic Church. Communism means the abolition of the mental and emotional strain on the poor caused by their insecurity and impoverishment at the hands of the rich. Communism means regional autonomy and decentralization. Communism, championing human slavery in the name of social justice, represents the highest form of human freedom: "The Spanish Civil War broke out in July, 1936, after a group of conservative military tried to overthrow the progressive government of the Popular Front, elected in February of the same year. Expecting an easy coup, the military rebels were surprised to encounter massive popular resistance, especially in the large urban centers. In a matter of days, the country was split in half, with one zone controlled by the government (known as Republicans, Loyalists, or Reds), and the other by the rebels (also referred to as Nationalists, Fascists, or Whites). Three years of bloody fighting followed. General Franco quickly emerged as the Nationalist commander in chief. The main leaders on the Republican side were President Azana and Prime Ministers Largo Caballero and Negrin. The war ended with a Nationalist victory on April 1, 1939; Franco would rule Spain as a ruthless dictator until his death in 1975. The war quickly became internationalized. Global public opinion rallied around one of the two factions, seeing the war as either a struggle of democracy against fascism or, conversely, of Christian civilization against Communism. Fearful of escalation, several Western governments signed a Non Intervention Pact. It was a dead letter from the outset. Franco immediately requested and received extensive military support from nazi Germany and fascist Italy. The Republic was in turn supported by the Soviet Union and, to a smaller extent, by Mexico. The other Western powers refused to stand by the embattled Republic, not even allowing it to buy arms on the international market. Nevertheless, thousands of concerned citizens from some fifty nations, ignoring their own governments' purported neutrality, rallied to the Republic's support. Almost forty thousand men and women, including 2,800 Americans, traveled to Spain to help fight fascism. Most of them joined the International Brigades, organized in 1936 by the Communist International. The US volunteers in Spain formed several battalions and served in various units (medical, transportation) and came to be known collectively as the Abraham Lincoln Brigade. For all its international repercussions, the war's root causes were domestic. Political and social tensions had been building up in Spain for years. Still predominantly an agrarian society with limited industrial centers, the country was rife with inequalities. In the countryside, traditional divisions endured between wealthy landowners, doggedly preserving their position, and a huge number of landless laborers and poverty stricken smallholders, desperate to lift themselves from an existence of near starvation. The situation of the urban working class was equally dismal. Illiteracy rates were high. The government that came to power after the proclamation of the Republic in 1931 embarked on an ambitious program of modernization, secularization, social justice, and greater regional autonomy, with the support of the liberal middle classes, the Socialist and Communist parties and unions, the regionalist parties, as well as the powerful Anarchist movement. It met with strong resistance from the landowners, the army, and the Catholic Church. These same three groups, together with the small but powerful fascist party (Falange), formed the backbone of the Nationalists." (Spanish Civil War Summary, Abraham Lincoln Brigades Archives). Now listen to the Nationalists reject capitalism as a right wing regime of individual freedom. Listen to them proclaim that fascism is the highest spiritual system known to man. Fascism is a leftist political system but rejects the original leftism of class interests and class war in favor of a new leftism focused on national interests and national war. Fascism is slavery in the name of the mystical Fatherland. Fascism is slavery in the name of the mystical Homeland. Fascism is slavery in the name of a mystical national Unity. Fascism is authoritarian government which alone can liberate the working class. Fascism is a regime of totalitarian social, political and economic organization and integration in the name of the mystical Race and is the highest form of human freedom: "Today's movement, which is not a party movement, but a movement, we could almost say an antiparty, let it be known from now on, is neither right nor left. Because deep down, the right is the aspiration to maintain an economic organization, even if it is unjust, and the left is, deep down, the desire to subvert an economic organization, even if many good things are dragged into the subversion. Then, this is decorated in both with a series of spiritual considerations. Let all who listen to us in good faith know that these spiritual considerations all fit into our movement; but that our movement will in no way tie its destinies to the group interest or the class interest that nestles under the superficial division of right and left. The Fatherland is a total unity, in which all individuals and all classes are integrated; the Homeland cannot be in the hands of the strongest class or the best organized party. The Homeland is a transcendent synthesis, an indivisible synthesis, with its own ends to fulfil; and what we want is for the movement of this day, and the State that it creates, to be the effective, authoritarian instrument, at the service of an indisputable unity, of that permanent unity, of that irrevocable unity that is called the Homeland." (Speech By Jose Antonio Primo de Rivera Exposing The Fundamental Points Of The Spanish Falange, Teatro de la Comedia, Madrid, Spain October 29, 1933). Across Spain, Morocco, Guinea, Portugal and Western Sahara a war raged in the 1930s for two years, eight months, two weeks and two days. It was a war fought between two rival, brother gangs fighting for the control of Spain. These forces represented two sides of the same terrifying coin, stamped collectivism, the religion that man is a rightless slave of the group, regarded as a supernatural being apart from and superior to the sum of the individuals who comprise it. Over this vast theater of war, extending from Europe into Africa, two flags were unfurled representing the two opposing forces: the Red Star flag of the Soviet Union and the swastika flag of the Third Reich. The communist Republicans were led by Manuel Azana, while the fascist Nationalists were led by Francisco Franco. Less than a century after Franco entered Madrid and declared victory on April 1 1939, the Marxist cancers of collectivism have entered the capitals of the West and declared victory.

REVOLUTION

A revolution is a fundamental change in a society, the overthrow of a government or a social order. Revolutions have occurred throughout history and have brought shining progress or dark retrogression in their wake. Commencing in Britain in the late eighteenth century, the Industrial Revolution was a glorious boon to mankind, bringing the benefits of the steam engine, the factory system, canal construction and mechanized textile production to every nation on Earth. The Russian Revolution of 1917 set into motion an international movement and conspiracy to create a global slave empire under a religion called Marxism. On April 19, 1775, at Lexington and Concord, in Middlesex County, Province of Massachusetts Bay, British America, shots were fired which were heard around the world. They were cries for freedom sent out at the commencement of the American Revolutionary War, in which American Patriot forces and the Continental Army, under the command of George Washington, defeated the British Army and demanded the freedom to which they, as free born people, were entitled, and which the British had enjoyed. The right of people to revolt against tyranny is enshrined in America's founding documents. Written by Thomas Jefferson in June 1776 and published on July 4, two days after the Continental Congress voted to declare independence from Britain, the Declaration of Independence affirms the right of the people and the duty of the people oppressed by a government, for whom peaceful means of redress have been foreclosed, to overthrow the government by force of arms: "We hold these truths to be self evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness." Published anonymously from fear of reprisals on January 10, 1776, Common Sense by Thomas Paine affirms the right of people oppressed by a government, for whom the method of peace has proven ineffectual, to overthrow it by the hammer blows of violence: "Every quiet method for peace has been ineffectual. Our prayers have been rejected with disdain; and has tended to convince us that nothing flatters vanity or confirms obstinacy in Kings more than repeated petitioning—and nothing hath contributed more, than that very measure, to make the Kings of Europe absolute. Witness Denmark and Sweden. Wherefore, since nothing but blows will do, for God's sake let us come to a final separation, and not leave the next generation to be cutting throats, under the violated, unmeaning names of parent and child." Two and a half centuries after the onset of America's revolutionary violence, civilized people have heard the call to arms once again. They have heard the call from their conscience in consequence of a development commencing in the early twentieth century. At this time, the American people self destructed and rejected the traditions and institutions fought for during the American Revolution. They adopted the fearsome new zeitgeist coursing through the West and rejected everything the Founding Fathers of the nation had stood for. The Founding Fathers stood for reason, science, the evidence of the senses and the rights of the individual. The new spirit of the times stood for a form of supernaturalism which worshiped at the altars of a God on Earth called the Collective. Unperceivable, unbound by the laws of logic and held to exist apart from and superior to the individuals which comprised it, the Collective claimed the divine right to sacrifice individuals to its needs and interests. As the century advanced, it would appear under a plethora of names, such as state, community, class, race, gender and nation, names one and all for the same fire breathing monster which stalked the Earth by popular demand and consumed people alive. In the twenty first century, after one hundred years of growing and expanding like a cancer into every sector of society, the monster of the Collective has achieved victory over American society and uprooted the establishment of freedom root and branch. It has been voted into power in successive landslides, up ballot and down ballot, under red tickets stamped progressivism, and is so fixed, so entrenched and so ingrained that it cannot be removed by peaceful methods and can only be removed by force of arms. Revolution. In the twenty first century, the new American leviathan rigged the 2020 presidential election and installed Joe Biden into power. The FBI and CIA falsely condemned as Russian disinformation irrrefutable laptop email evidence establishing the existence of a global influence peddling operation run by Joe Biden and his family while Biden was vice president. The FBI and CIA forced social media platforms such as Facebook to suppress news stories about the scandal. This suppression cost Donald Trump the election because had Biden voters known about Biden's operation, they would have voted for Trump. The establishment, in the figure of Mark Zuckerberg, donated 400 million dollars to Democrat election officials in Democrat districts in order to recruit Democrat voters and disqualify Republican voters. The establishment, in the figures of local, state and federal judges, dismissed on nonsubstantive, nonmerit based, purely procedural grounds claims that votes for Biden were manufactured by absentee vote procedures in which military absentee ballots cast for Trump were thrown into trash bins: "That election as impacted by several undue outside factors that never had influenced American elections before, including interference by the FBI and CIA when they falsely claimed Biden family scandals documented in Hunter Biden's abandoned laptop computer were 'disinformation.' A survey showed that meddling probably changed the outcome, giving the White House to Donald Trump, while another outside influence was from the $400 million that Mark Zuckerberg gave to elections officials, who often used it to recruit voters in Democrat districts. A lot of other claims about vote fraud were dismissed by judges, often on procedural grounds so there never was a ruling on the actual substance of claims that absentee vote procedures, ballot handling and more were corrupted. The FBI learned one election official in Pennsylvania 'dumped seven returned military absentee ballots into the garbage.' All were identified as votes for Trump." (Ex AG Bill Barr Scolded By Inspector General Over Vote Fraud Claims In 2020 by Bob Unruh). Revolution. In the twenty first century, the new American leviathan has institutionalized a state of mental and moral dementia. It has dissolved the nation's borders and allowed ten million illegal, subhuman, migrant scum to settle permanently. It has allowed them to collect welfare, feed off the state and bleed society white. It has condemned capitalism as a regime of racism, unfairness and grinding poverty. It has proclaimed that capitalism deprives the working class of freedom, prosperity and security. It has printed money by the trillions and robbed people of their wealth and purchasing power through inflation. It has the promoted the green politics of antiindustrial and antitechnological revolution whose agenda is the destruction of civilization in the name of eliminating greenhouse gas emissions. It has placed a bullseye on the leader of the national antiestablishment opposition, the forty fifth president of the United States who is running for president in 2024 and seeks to make America free again, and opened fire on Donald Trump: "Biden's track record as president may be more concerning than his cognitive decline. He has literally destroyed the US border, deliberately allowing the entry of more than 10 million illegal aliens. His callous handlers' agenda was to import abjectly poor constituencies in need of vast government services without regard for the current struggles of a battered American middle class and poor. The widespread poverty of a vast new cohort of illegal immigrants could serve as indictments of a 'racist,' 'unequal,' and 'unfair' America—as if the residents of East Palestine, Ohio or inner city Chicago had anything to do with the centuries-long corruption and oppression of Mexico and Latin America that daily drives thousands of their own poorest citizens northwards to a society founded on very different ideas than those of their homelands. Note that the left, neither in Mexico nor in America, never asks why millions of these impoverished people prefer to break into a supposedly racist America. Much less do they even distinguish those principles and values that once made America prosperous, free, and secure from their antitheses that have sadly made much of Latin America mostly poor, without freedom, and insecure. Biden inherited near zero real interest rates and inflation at 1.4 percent. Almost immediately, in nihilistic fashion, Biden did to a sound economy what he had done to a secure border. So, he recklessly printed money at a time of spiraling, quarantine ending demand and supply chain disruption. Middle class wages never caught up with Biden's inflation, as prices for key staples are nearly 30 percent higher than when he took office. Energy prices soared, even as Biden's green agenda proved unworkable and prompted draining the strategic petroleum reserve and begging foreign oil despots before key elections. The 'unifier' Biden by design needlessly alienated nearly half the country, and in his debate, he reiterated why Trump supporters do not deserve his concern. And more ominously and recently, Biden grossly told hundreds of his donors that 'it's time to put Trump in a bullseye'—just days before the attempt on Trump's life." (The Biden Titanic by Victor Hansen). Revolution. In the twenty first century, black rain has fallen from the skies of the former leader of the free world. It is radioactive poison and residue from an explosion. One hundred years ago, a bomb was dropped on the nation from an airplane loaded and flown by the people. This was an atom bomb called Marxism and it would rain down gender, race and class politics on the land and make freedom unable to take root, grow or flourish again. In America in the twenty first century, nothing takes root, grows or flourishes except tyranny and disorder. Civilized people are aghast at this latter day scene from hell and dream of its eradication.

JOE McCARTHY: ANTICOMMUNIST, ANTIESTABLISHMENT, FIGHTER FOR AMERICA

An antiestablishment view is one which stands in opposition to the ruling principles of society. The term was coined in 1958 by the British magazine New Statesman to describe the communist social and political agenda it was promoting. Nonpartisan observers at the time rejected the magazine's description because they understood that the British establishment was colored by communism in its promotion of industrial nationalisation, cradle to grave welfare statism, and the surrender of British colonies and the British Empire, and that the magazine was in fact a faithful voice of the establishment. But they pointed to a political figure active in America in the early 1950s as a true exemplar of antiestablishment views. They pointed to him as a maverick, an unorthodox figure, a nonconformist and an antiestablishmentarian bar none. They pointed to him as a true opponent of the nation's ruling circles who challenged their dogma and creed. He was a Republican senator from the state of Wisconsin from 1947 until his death in 1957. He challenged both the Republican and Democrat parties and incurred the undying wrath of both, which led to a smear campaign conducted against him by the establishment and the establishment's formal censure of him in the United States Senate in 1954. His name was Joseph McCarthy and the story of his career is at once the story of a fearless struggle against the number one enemy of freedom in our time, and the fate which ever befalls antiestablishmentarians throughout history. McCarthy's target was an international movement and conspiracy called communism, and the establishment's target was McCarthy, and it placed a bullseye on the junior senator from Wisconsin and opened fire. McCarthy was accused by the establishment of making unsubstantiated accusations of communist sympathies against individuals employed by the federal government. The general practice of making unsubstantiated accusations against individuals the establishment labeled McCarthyism, and from that time onward up to the present day it would deploy this label against anyone and everyone who exposed communist involvement in the government. Fact. McCarthy exposed individuals employed by the United States State Department who were veritable portraits of treason. They comprised a class of people who were doctrinaire communists, card carrying subversives, loyal to the Communist Party, disloyal to the cause of freedom, and morally unfit to work for the federal government. McCarthy's exposes were corroborated by the findings of the State Department's Security Office and Loyalty Board: "On February 20, 1950, without naming names, I gave the Senate a resume of the facts from the files of 81 individuals—including the 57 referred to at Wheeling. While I strongly felt that the 57 were either communists or at least completely loyal to the Communist Party, the 81 included cases which were marginal. All their files suggested unfitness for government jobs. However, I felt that some might be able to prove their loyalty. I therefore called for a careful investigation in closed session by a Senate committee. To again summarize the numbers used: 205—Number of State Department employees referred to in a letter of Secretary of State James Byrnes. They were declared unfit for government service by the President's board but were not discharged. Neither the Congress nor the American people have been advised who those people were or whether they are today employed bv the government. 81—Cases which McCarthy presented to the Senate in a speech on February 20, 1950. This list included the 57, plus additional cases of less importance against whom the evidence was less conclusive. 57—State Department employees described by McCarthy in a speech in Wheeling, West Virginia, as either members of or loyal to the Communist Party. Incidentally, the State Department's Security Officer, Carlisle Humelsine, and the Chairman of the State Department Loyalty Board, Conrad Snow, admitted under rigorous cross examination that 54 out of 57 cases of State Department employees charged with disloyalty, resigned while their cases were pending before a loyalty panel. The other three, who were found to be disloyal, have appealed their cases to Dean Acheson." (McCarthyism: The Fight For America by Joe McCarthy). Fact. McCarthy exposed the following disloyal Americans and high security risks in the federal government. He exposed John Stewart Service, removed by the Loyalty Review Board. He exposed Edward Posniak, removed by the Loyalty Board. He exposed Esther Brunauer, who gave top secret State Department information to the Soviets. He exposed Stephen Brunauer, member of the Young Communist League, who gave top secret explosives information to the Soviets. He exposed Peveril Meigs, who was removed by the Loyalty Program. He exposed Hans Lansberg, who was removed by the Loyalty Review Board. He exposed Oliver Edmund Clubb, ordered removed by the Loyalty Board, whose decision was overruled by Secretary of State Dean Acheson. The latter was notorious as an appeaser of communism responsible for the "loss of China," and the head of a "College of Cowardly Containment" who refused to "turn his back on Alger Hiss," convicted communist spy protected by the establishment for ten years. Acheson allowed Clubb to resign with a clear record and receive a lifetime pension of 76,000 dollars per year in current dollars. McCarthy exposed William Remington, member of the Communist Party who supplied top secret government documents to a Soviet courier. He was convicted of espionage and sentenced to five years in prison, but his conviction was overturned on procedural, nonevidentiary, nonsubstantive grounds. McCarthy exposed V. Lorwin, who was removed by the State Department's Loyalty Program. He exposed William Stone, who was ordered removed by the State Department Security Program. Assistant Secretary of State William Benton refused to heed the evidence and remove Stone, and the Civil Service Commission Loyalty Review Board selected a panel to remove him, but he resigned before the commencement of hearings: "All of those you named before the Tydings Committee were cleared by that committee. Since then, have any of them been removed from the government on the grounds that they were either disloyal or bad security risks? Yes, the following is a partial list. 1. John Stewart Service. Service was dismissed from the State Department on September 13, 1951, on orders from the Loyalty Review Board, which reversed the State Department's previous clearance. 2. Edward Posniak. Posniak, after having been cleared by the State Department Loyalty Board in November, 1948, resigned after I exposed his record. He was subsequently called for questioning before a Grand Jury. 3. Esther Brunauer. Mrs Brunauer has been suspended from a high State job where she was handling secret material. 4. Stephen Brunauer. Brunauer, an admitted former member of the Young Communist League, was suspended from his job as head of the Navy's high explosives section where he was engaged in top secret work. He resigned before the Navy's Loyalty Board could complete questioning him and dispose of his case. 5. Peveril Meigs. Meigs was allowed to resign from the State Department with a clear record. He then obtained a job with the Military Establishment. He was discharged from that job under the Loyalty Program. 6. Hans Lansberg. Lansberg had been allowed to resign from the State Department with a clear record. He then secured a position as an economist with the Department of Commerce. The Secretary of Commerce ordered Lansberg discharged under Loyalty Program. The Loyalty Review Board, on appeal, affirmed the action of the Secretary of Commerce, and Lansberg was removed from his position on May 25, 1951. Oliver Edmund Clubb. Clubb, Director of the State Department's Division of Chinese Affairs, was cleared by the Tydings Committee, but State Department Loyalty Board unanimously ruled against Clubb. Dean Acheson, however, overruled the Loyalty Board and gave Clubb a clean bill of health, after which Clubb immediately resigned to accept a lifetime pension of 5,800 dollars. 8. William Remington. Remington was convicted in connection with his membership in the Communist Party and sentenced to 5 years. Remington was on the Commerce Department's payroll but working closely with the State Department, handling secret material. When his case was presented to the Tydings Committee, that committee failed to hear the evidence and cleared him. Remington was later indicted by a Grand Jury. Evidence presented at his trial showed that he had supplied secret government documents to a Soviet courier. He was convicted and sentenced to 5 years. His conviction was set aside on technical grounds. He has since been reindicted on 5 counts. 9. V. Lorwin. Lorwin was suspended under the State Department's Loyalty Program (according to a letter received from the Chairman of the Civil Service Loyalty Review Board in June 1951). 10. William T. Stone. Stone was ordered removed under the State Department Security Program while he was assistant to Assistant Secretary of State William Benton (now Senator Benton). However, Benton failed to remove Stone in accordance with that order. On February 2, 1952, Stone resigned after the Civil Service Commission Loyalty Review Board had selected a panel to rehear his case. The list is growing from month to month. It should be remembered that it took ten years to get rid of Hiss after he had been named as a Communist spy." (McCarthyism: The Fight For America by Joe McCarthy). In 1953, Joe McCarthy saw a nightmare and told his nation about it. He saw twenty one years of treason flash across his mind. Twenty one years of treason, through the administrations of Franklin Roosevelt, Harry Truman and Dwight Eisenhower, through Democrat and Republican administrations alike, through the offices and corridors of the nation's establishment. Twenty one years of treason, which placed communists in high places and key spots in the federal government, extending all the way up to the White House. Twenty one years of treason, which saw America's surrender in Eastern Europe, China and Korea to a communist juggernaut. Twenty one years of treason, which saw policies of appeasement and containment of communism put in place of confrontation and rollback. Twenty one years of treason, established by messages transmitted by intelligence agencies of the Soviet Union to American operatives, decrypted by the Venona Project, a counterintelligence program started during World War II by the United States Army Signal Intelligence Service, and established by Soviet espionage data opened to the West after the fall of the Soviet Union. Twenty one years of treason, exposed to the nation, in the face of denials and smear campaigns launched by the establishment, by a profile in courage called Joe McCarthy.

SEWAGE SUBMERGES POSTCOLONIAL AFRICA

Even though Europe is the smallest of the world's four continents, it has for various reasons a position that places it before all others. Its inhabitants have excellent customs, they are courteous and erudite in both sciences and crafts. (Europa by Johann Heinrich Zedler, in Zedlers Universal Lexicon, 1741). Europe's geographical situation and its cultural and political significance are clearly the most important of the five continents, over which it has gained a most influential government both in material and even more so in cultural aspects. (Brockhaus Encyclopedia, 1847). Europe. The West. After Classical Greco-Roman civilization, the greatest civilization in the history of mankind. Its Age of Enlightenment stood for the values which sustain civilized human life: reason, science, the evidence of the senses, productive work and the freedom of the individual. Wherever Western imperialism planted its flag, in the darkest and most distant recesses of the Earth, it planted the values of civilized life and liberated the inhabitants. Wherever it withdrew from these places, they returned to the hell in which they were found, unless they had managed by heroic efforts to reject their native life and make the Western values they were taught their own. This rarely happened and the history of postcolonial societies is a history of subhuman cultures rejecting the veneer of civilization put into place by Western imperialism, and reverting back to type, back to their moral DNA, back to their native subhumanity. Their type, their moral DNA, their native subhumanity is stamped with a religion which has poisoned every cell in their minds. It is the telltale symptom of all subhumanity and all civilizations in a state of decline. This religion proclaims that individuals are not the primary units of reality but tribes are. These tribes are supernatural entities held to be unperceivable and to exist apart from and superior to the individuals which comprise them. These tribes are races and ethnicities, and an individual's personal identity is held to be purely abstract, racial or ethnic in character, and not physical, flesh and blood or truly individual. Individuals possess no reality, dignity or worth of their own but only insofar as they are members of races and ethnicities. There is no such thing as individual existence, and all thoughts are tribal thoughts, all decisions are tribal decisions, all actions are tribal actions and all guilt is tribal guilt. Because the tribe is superior to the individual, the individual is the rightless, passive slave of the tribe and the tribe may dispose of his life and property in any manner it deems fit. Now look at a continent abandoned by the West, starting with the decolonization of Libya in 1951, and see a poster child for what almost inevitably happens whenever civilization abandons the savage cultures it has liberated. Africa is the distilled essence and embodiment of savagery. The African saw a desert he had no mental ability to cross. He saw an ocean he had no mental ability to navigate. For thousands of years, he vegetated in obscurity and civilized people called his land the Dark Continent. Possessing abundant reserves of animal vitality, the African was morally, intellectually and politically inept. His ingrained belief system of supernaturalism and tribalism demanded cannibalism and human sacrifice, presided over by wizards and witch doctors. Devoid of rational constructive power, the African never evolved civilization and contributed nothing to the progress of mankind. Look at Africa since 1960, the year anticolonialists celebrate as the Year of Africa. Look at the past seventy five years and see a land sink back into the abyss and return to the nothingness from whence it arose. See a land devoid economic prosperity. See a land unable to feed its people. See a land locked in sealed capsules of civil war and instability. See a land emaciated by mass famine. See a land bloodied by political conflicts and competitiveness. See a land unable to pay its civil servants or armed forces. See a land devoid of law, order and government services and superabundant in the provision of corruption, nepotism and mismanagement. See a land lacking the political will and the popular support to establish freedom. See a land devoid of all forms of progress and incapable of any type of reform. See a land undeveloped, underdeveloped and incapable of development. See a land under the permanent iron heel of military commanders and authoritarian leaders. See a land ungoverned and ungovernable, whose only institutions are portraits of anarchy and the survival of the strongest. See a land whose economy is devoid of work, productivity and efficiency of any kind. See a land in which the only entities which possess sovereignty and independence are bloodthirsty racial and ethnic tribes lording over the people. See a land whose army, police, security and intelligence services are unchecked powers unto themselves without concern for the rule of law or the public welfare. See a land ground into dust by deprivation and want. See a land whose people are without work and without the will, the desire or the ability to work. See a land whose youth are the face of its future. This is a future of crime, delinquency, rebellion for the sake of rebellion and the excitement of violence: "Back in 1950, Liberia and Ethiopia were the only two African countries that were free from colonial rule. Today, nearly all African countries are independent and sovereign states. Some, like South Sudan, Eritrea and Namibia, even became independent from other African countries. However, becoming an independent nation has not necessarily translated into economic or regional prosperity in many instances, according to experts like Juste Codjo, an assistant professor and security studies analyst from Benin. 'Independence is rather just something that we can say happened, but we cannot confirm that, in reality, African countries are fully independent,' Codjo told Deutsche Welle. For Ghanaian political analyst Fidel Amakye Owusu, it’s more of a case by case issue. Namibia, for example, seems to have fared significantly better than South Sudan, despite both African countries taking similar paths to independence. Africa's youngest nation, South Sudan, celebrated 13 years of independence on July 9. Yet in that short amount of time, the country has had to endure a seven year civil war. In 2017, the UN declared a famine across the nation. Added to that is years of political infighting. South Sudanese international development scholar James Boboya told DW that initially, there was great optimism in the country. However, this changed quickly. 'We have civil servants and armed forces in this country staying for over eight months without being paid their salaries,' he said. 'What the government inherited from Sudan was anarchy, lack of services, corruption and mismanagement of resources.' All these factors have led to further 'issues of marginalization, lack of freedoms and lack of development,' he added. Boboya suggested that a lack of political will and true leadership are at the core of the ongoing nature of South Sudan's failures, adding also that crucial security institutions in the country need to have a centralized, unified mandate. 'The government has to resolve the issue of the civil state reforms so that we have one army, one police, one national security and one intelligence service that are doing their work toward ensuring the security of South Sudan,' he said. Kingsley Sheteh Newuh, a political economist from Cameroon, agrees South Sudan's institutions need to be strengthened from within. 'The lack of strong, independent institutions has led to poor governance, inefficiency and corruption,' he said. 'Poor leadership characterized by corruption, nepotism and authoritarianism has significantly contributed to the failures of many African nations.' Newuh added that leaders who prioritize personal power over national development tend to face exacerbated issues like poverty, conflict and underdevelopment. South Sudanese scholar Boboya shares the same outlook on leadership in the context of his own country. 'There have been a lot of individual warlords and political leaders who took advantage of the situation, and they began to encourage rebellion throughout South Sudan,' said Boboya, stressing that this is a main factor in the country's gains towards independence being 'eroded.' Rwanda is far from having resolved all of its issues. 'It is one of the poorest countries in Africa with high youth unemployment, and the economy is not still stable,' Owusu said. Malawi celebrated 60 years of independence on July 6. Despite there being no active conflict in the country, it is ranked by the World Bank as the fourth poorest nation in the world, with 70% of Malawians living on less than $2.15 (€2) a day. In the 21st century, Africa is facing a host of challenges. Newuh said corruption still plagues many African nations, stressing that this 'needs to be addressed, as it creates a vicious cycle of underdevelopment, poverty and political instability in many African countries.' 'Youth unemployment is also holding the continent back,' Owusu said." (Why Independence Isn't Enough For Some African Nations by Mimi Takambou, Cai Nebe and Chrispin Mwakideu). Look at Africa today and see the return of unnumbered nightmare ages marked by cannibalism, grave robbing, the dance of human bones, cemeteries wailing in the night, and the degradation of drug abuse: "Sierra Leone's President Julius Maada Bio declared a national emergency on Friday over surging abuse of kush, an addictive drug that can be manufactured from powdered human bones. Addicts have been digging up graves to get the bones they need, prompting the police to station guards around cemeteries in the capital city of Freetown. 'Our country is currently faced with an existential threat due to the ravaging impact of drugs and substance abuse, particularly the devastating synthetic drug kush,' President Bio said on Friday in a televised address to the nation." (Sierra Leone Declares State Of Emergency Over 'Zombie' Drug Made From Human Bones by John Hayward). In the wake of the decolonization movement launched in the West, Africa today has returned to the Africa of ancient yesterdays, isolated from all human existence. Peddling like their ancestors rank superstitions, rabid antienlightenment, ruthless tribal worship and relentless human enslavement, dark demons lord over the African land, grinning and leering out from black pits of intimidation. With strange faces scaring civilized people to death, unpronouncable names generating random noise, and polysyllabic diseases spelling out death and destruction, they are denizens of a continent holding a dubious distinction. It is the world's largest jungle, zoo and refuge for the insane.

WITCHES' SABBATHS ON CAMPUS

Civilization is a mighty tree nourished and held aloft by reason. A civilization's ages of reason are its ages of growth and strength, while the rejection of reason and embrace of religion is its symptom of downfall and decline. Whatever elements of civilization still exist in the West today are due the passage through its great ages of reason, the Renaissance, the Age of Enlightenment and the Scientific and Industrial Revolutions, while the retrogression engulfing the West today has been brought about the resurgence of an age of religiousness. This age has returned from the original Dark Ages ruled by the Catholic Church, with only the names and faces changed. In the twenty first century, the mighty tree of the West, rendered living and vital by the values of sanity, science, logic, empiricism and the evidence of the senses, has been attacked by mushroom clusters of religious madness sprouting at its base. They are growing and expanding, and making the tree roots rot and decay, by the moral weakness, weariness and degeneration of the masses, who have chosen to surrender their minds to a dark idol. This dark idol was banished during the Renaissance, commenced a comeback during the Age of Romanticism, and returned in full force in the twentieth century, and rules the present day. In addition to the original dark idol of Christianity, the dark idols worshipped today include Islam, Orthodox Judaism, Marxism with its multifarious gender, race and class variants, and witchcraft. Witchcraft, the fabrication of magic, sorcery and spells to inflict harm, has returned to the West and occupies the front ranks of religions now assiduously studied by the masses. Witchcraft, adopted in homes, schools and offices throughout the West, and pervading the thoughts of the new folk appearing during the final act of the West. Witchcraft, one more religion in the present day arsenal of the Devil by which he is blasting the Enlightenment and reducing it to dust. Traditionally an institution devoted to academic study in higher education, the university has become in the twenty first century a voice and expression of cultural degeneration. Look at what is on offer today in an institution venerated for centuries in the Latin phrase universitas magistrorum et scholarium, "a community of teachers and scholars." Look at the new subjects of study peddled and see a portrait of civilizational decline the likes of which mankind has not seen since the fall of Rome fifteen hundred years ago before the antiEnlightenment monsters of Christianity and barbarism. Look at the university today and see the study of tarot cards, spellbooks and sorcery. See classes and seminars held on the art of black magic. See a tidal wave of pseudoserious pseudoscholars peddle the tenets of witchcraft. See students lock themselves in worlds of fantasy and the supernatural. See students devour vampires and get devoured by them. See magic peddled as an academic discipline. See professors take witchcraft seriously and give it intellectual and scholarly respectability. See classes study ghosts, devils, demons and the dead. See courses worship irrationality, radical feminism and the sinister forces of the supernatural. See professors preach witchcraft from the pulpit of Marxist gender and feminist studies. See professors peddle witchcraft in courses on Taylor Swift. See students practice magical powers and dream of levitation. See professors peddle witches' incantations as the highest form of literature. See students study the stories and oral traditions of fortune telling. See professors teach students that the best thinkers and writers are those who peddle mystical insights and magical connections. See professors teach students how to read ancient cards and crystal balls and gaze into the future. See professors peddle witchcraft under the guise of studying history, literature, Walt Disney films and Grimm's fairy tales. See professors peddle witchcraft under the guise of studying Harry Potter novels. See seminars, semesters, classes and course catalogs call for the persecution of students who reject witchcraft in favor of sanity. See professors peddle magic as the most natural and beneficial practice known to man. See professors teach students to abandon the world of critical thought and embrace the world of witchcraft. See professors darken classrooms with the black light of magic texts, occult objects and carved witches' bones. See professors teach students that they need not have any evidence to believe in witches but only mystical visions. See professors peddle witchcraft through studies of peoples, cultures and politics. See professors peddle witchcraft through Marxist studies of gender, race and class politics. See professors peddle witchcraft as an antidote to the capitalist system of white male privilege. See professors peddle witchcraft in the name of fighting discrimination and empowering people with disabilities. See professors peddle the rituals and beliefs of demons and witches and project a world in which objects float without mass or weight. See students behold evil spirits, demonic possession and torments in hell. See professors teach students how to drive out evil spirits from people. See professors teach students how to pray to the Almighty and cast out illness. See course descriptions demand students adhere to and parrot the party line expressed in theories and treatises on witchcraft. See professors peddle witchcraft in the name of fighting colonialism. See professors teach students how to withdraw from reality and descend into dazes, stupors and meetings in which they make contact with the dead. See course instructors peddle the legends and narratives of witches as scientifically established facts. See professor teach students that all witchcraft is real and there is no such thing as fake witchcraft. See professors celebrate the hanging of the Enlightenment on the gallows of ancient magic, modern witchcraft and the suicide of the West: "Universities are offering a variety of classes on witchcraft and magic this fall, including courses that will examine tarot cards, create spellbooks, and analyze why people accuse Taylor Swift of sorcery. And professors say they have noticed a growing academic interest in the topic. 'The number of books published by serious scholars on witchcraft since the 1970s is just incredible, it’s like a tsunami,' Yale University Professor Carlos Eire told The College Fix recently via Zoom. Eire, who teaches religion and studies the history of the supernatural, said most students know it’s just fantasy. But he also acknowledged there are some who may take witchcraft seriously and would be attracted to such courses. He connected the increased interest to the popularity of supernatural books and shows like the Harry Potter series, Interview with a Vampire, and Deborah Harkness’s book turned Amazon Prime series A Discovery of Witches. Eire said he does not have any concerns about the growth in academic courses on magic and related topics as long as the focus is academic. 'There is some intellectual or scholarly dimension missing if it's just teaching people spells,' he said. Yale is one of a number of universities offering classes on the topic this fall. Its fall class, History of the Night will 'examine how the night became the abode of the ghost, the devil, the witch, and the dead, according to the course description. At Duke University, a first year writing course called Radical Magic will analyse why magic and the supernatural 'have been coded as feminine, irrational, and sinister.' Students also will discuss why people accuse Taylor Swift of witchcraft. Course instructor Cheryl Spinner told The Fix via email her class will look at footage of Swift's Eras Tour and 'use gender and feminist studies to parse out what's really going on with these accusations.' Spinner said she had productive discussions in previous classes about the pop star, including the lyrics from one of her songs: 'I leap from the gallows and I levitate down your street,' which Swift sings on a moving stage that appears to make her float. The class also will examine the literacy quality of tarot cards, spells, and incantations. Their final project will be to create a grimoire, or spellbook that records 'magical insights and oral traditions that might otherwise be forgotten,' according to Spinner. 'Students do readings for each other, and in doing so they are training their brains to make connections between cards, to create complex stories that add up to a totality,' Spinner told The Fix via email. Spinner said she is not teaching her students to predict the future but to be better thinkers and writers. Georgetown University also is offering several courses on the subject this fall, The Fix found in a search of its course catalog. One, Witches in History, Literature, and Film, will examine the representation of the witch in the context of history, literature, and film, including the Grimm brothers fairy tales and Disney films, according to the course description. German Professor Astrid Wiegert, who teaches the class, told The Fix in a recent email that she also has noticed an increase in the subject's popularity in her 25 years of teaching. Wiegert said Georgetown, a private Catholic university, typically offers three to four classes per semester that connect witchcraft with various disciplines, such as film, literature, and history. 'As a societal and historical phenomenon, the topic of witchcraft is one that defies easy explanations and easy answers,' Wiegert said. 'It defies black and white thinking and requires that students grapple with the many nuances of the phenomenon that range from local and regional specificities, to gender issues (it was not only old women with an outsider status who were accused and killed), to the Church having critics within its ranks who worked for the abolition of witch persecutions,' Wiegert said. At Indiana University, the course A History of Magic; or, It is All Fun and Games Until Someone Gets Accused of Witchcraft will explore online catalogs and images of magic texts and objects, including 13th century Chinese carved bones and witchhunts in Europe and North America. History Professor Clare Griffin, who teaches the class, told The Fix examining the history of magic helps students to think critically. 'Ideas about magic–whether natural, beneficial, harmful, or fake–can be found across the world and dating back to the ancient period,' she said." (Spellbooks, Rituals, 'Demonology,' Taylor Swift Rumors: Classes On Witchcraft Abound This Fall By Kayley Chartier). Five centuries after the Enlightenment banished witches from the West, the night has returned, brought down by an age of second religiousness. The twenty first century is a crime scene. It is the scene of high treason, the treason of the West against the Enlightenment. In the sabbaths, cauldrons and potions of the new witches, reason has been boiled away and dissolved.

IMMANUEL KANT AND THE PORNOGRAPHY OF VIOLENCE

Harvesting is the process of gathering mature crops. On large, mechanized farms, harvesting makes use of machinery such as the combine harvester. In societies and cultures throughout the world and throughout history, the completion of harvesting marks the end of the growing season and is celebrated in harvest festivals. These festivals are held in September or October and are joyous events, featuring feasting with foods drawn from the crops, the singing of hymns, and the decorating of schools, churches and chapels with baskets full of fruits and vegetables. The past one hundred years has seen a harvest of another type. It has seen the product and result of a process of sowing which commenced two hundred years before. The sowing was performed by a philosopher, the most influential philosopher in modern times, and the harvest has been a festival of horror which has engulfed the present day. The philosopher lived during the Enlightenment but was not of the Enlightenment, and dedicated his career to its subversion and destruction. Born in Konigsberg, Kingdom of Prussia, on April 22, 1724, Immanuel Kant is known as the Father of Modern Philosophy. While the age in which he lived affirmed what sane people had affirmed for thousands of years, he proceeded to deny, and to peddle a philosophy of insanity which would inspire disturbed people high and low, from all walks of life, from philosophers to the man on the street, and would set into motion the crime and chaos which inform the present day. Epitomized by such thinkers as Francis Bacon and Isaac Newton, the Enlightenment affirmed that the world of physical objects is real. It affirmed that physical existence exists or else nothing whatever exists. It affirmed that man is conscious of the physical world and that a consciousness held to be consciousness of nothing beyond itself is a contradiction in terms. It affirmed that knowledge of the physical world is acquired by means of the senses through a process of induction or inference from sense data, and is not acquired by any process of mental inspection, deduction or navel gazing. It affirmed that the notion of apriori knowledge, or knowledge acquired independently of experience, is incoherent and is the notion of causeless knowledge. Now listen to Kant toll a bell of psychosis as it had never been tolled before in the West and a bell which declared war on the Enlightenment. The bell rang out from his magnum opus, Critique Of Pure Reason, and when they heard the words, civilized people could scarcely believe what they heard. They heard Kant proclaim the object of his treatise: "I have found it necessary to deny knowledge in order to make room for faith." To deny knowledge: no philosopher in the West or in Classical Greco-Roman Culture had ever uttered such words. To deny knowledge: the brazenness of the renunciation of sanity was breathtaking and filled civilized people with abject fear for the future of civilization. Listen to Kant proclaim that what are called physical objects are in fact universal delusions and subjective appearances, and reality is that which is unperceivable, devoid of space and time, and is nonphysical and supernatural: "understand by the idealism of all appearances the doctrine that they are all together to be regarded as mere subjective representations and not things in themselves, and accordingly that time and space are only subjective forms of perception, not determinations given for themselves or conditions of objects as things in themselves. To this idealism is opposed realism, which regards space and time as something given in themselves, independent of our perception." (Critique Of Pure Reason by Immanuel Kant). Listen to Kant proclaim on the basis of a truism that all knowledge is acquired apriori. Listen to him proclaim that since the power to perceive objects is naturally and necessarily prior to the actual exercise of this power, space and time exist apriori in the mind prior to all perceptions: "Since, then, the receptivity of the subject, its capacity to be affected by objects, must necessarily precede all actual perceptions of these objects, it can readily be understood how space and time can be given prior to all actual perceptions, and so exist in the mind apriori." (Critique Of Pure Reason by Immanuel Kant). Listen to Kant proceed on the basis of a false assumption to a conclusion which defies all sanity. The false assumption is that knowledge is acquired independently of experience. The insane conclusion which necessarily follows from this is that all knowledge is subjective and is knowledge of nothing. The insane conclusion Kant champions is that perception does not conform to or perceive objects, but rather objects conform to and are created by perception: "Hitherto it has been assumed that all our knowledge must conform to objects. But all attempts to extend our knowledge of objects by establishing something in regard to them apriori, or by means of concepts independent of all experience, have, on this assumption, ended in failure. We must therefore make trial whether we may not have more success in the tasks of metaphysics, if we suppose that objects must conform to our knowledge." (Critique Of Pure Reason by Immanuel Kant). On the basis of his denial of the possibility of knowledge, Kant makes a deduction. He deduces that morality must likewise be subjective, and be based purely on feeling, intuition and the will. He proclaims that since the world of physical objects and consequences is unreal, true morality has no relation to performing good consequences and is based solely on carrying out the orders of the will and on doing one's duty for the sake of duty. True morality constructs categorical imperatives, or imperatives which must be obeyed without regard to consequences, and rejects all conditional imperatives, or imperatives which must be obeyed for the sake of achieving certain ends, such as a state of knowledge, know how, skill, perfection or happiness. Categorical imperative include the following. One must always tell the truth, though an injustice may be committed by telling the truth and innocent people may suffer. One must always keep one's promises, though an injustice may be committed by keeping one's promises and innocent people may suffer. One must always obey orders issued by one's superiors, though an injustice may be committed by obeying orders and innocent people may suffer. There are no circumstances which may rationally warrant the telling of a lie, the breaking of a promise or the disobeying of an order, because the world of physical circumstances and consequences is an illusion. Listen to Kant exalt duty for duty's sake, blind obedience and submission to the will, without regard to consequences or to the desire or inclination to perform rationally good acts: "Duty! Sublime and mighty name that embraces nothing charming or insinuating but requires submission. It holds forth a law that of itself finds entry into the mind and yet gains reluctant reverence (though not always obedience), a law before which all inclinations are dumb, even though they secretly work against it. That origin is worthy of you, and the root of your noble descent, is that which proudly rejects all kinship with the inclinations. This is the the indispensable condition of that worth which human beings alone can give themselves" (Critique Of Practical Reason by Immanuel Kant). The history of morality after Kant is a history of deductions made from Kantian premises. From Kant's premises that all knowledge is subjective and all morality consists thus in unconditional or categorical obedience to one's own feelings, intuitions and will, Friedrich Nietzsche, the existentialists, the beatniks, the rebels, the hippies and the new left made the deduction that true morality resides in mindless formalism, heroism, expression, assertion, action and the will to power. This neoKantian deduction rules the present day. Listen to its terrifying, psychotic bell ring out in the twenty first century. It proclaims that morality is violence without an ideology. Morality is violence without narratives. Morality is violence without theories. Morality is violence without a world view. Morality is violence without external fanaticism. Morality is violence without religious motives. Morality is violence without political motives. Morality is violence without justification by world events. Morality is the performance of duty for duty's sake, endangering the security of free societies, mass murder committed helter skelter, and the commission of violence for the sake of violence: "Counterterrorism forces are now battling a wide diversity of threats--including from a worrying number of people who don't support an underlying ideology, but are simply drawn to violence. Following Anjem Choudary's trial, the BBC spoke exclusively to Matt Jukes, the UK’s head of counterterrorism policing, and Rebecca Weiner, Deputy Commissioner of Intelligence and Counterterrorism at the New York Police Department. They told us that alongside extremist groups energized by events in the Middle East, the new security threats were sparking multiple investigations. It is a 'palpably different picture from it was,' says Assistant Commissioner Jukes. Deputy Commissioner Weiner singles out online extremism as probably the most important aspect of what she terms an 'everything, everywhere, all at once threat environment.' People are being 'overwhelmed with false narratives' and fed conspiracy theories, she says. A disturbing aspect of this, says Mr Jukes, is the increasing number of those turning to terrorism because of a fascination for violence, rather than ideological fanaticism. He says in 20% of cases his officers now handle, terror suspects have no settled view of the world: 'We are seeing people literally flip from searching for neo nazi material online to searching for Islamist material.' This is a real shift, he says, with people having previously gone from a single ideology, to extremism, and on to violence." (Rise In People Fascinated By Violence, Police Warn by Steve Swann, BBC News, July 30, 2024). The death of Kant in 1804 coincided with the end of the Enlightenment and the onset of the Age of Romanticism. Kant had planted the seeds of destruction of his age and in the post Enlightenment era, they blossomed into the blue flowers of madness. Two hundred years after the death of Kant and the end of the Enlightenment, the world has descended into a whirlwind of violence committed without goal or purpose beyond the excitement of violence. This is the bedlam of Kant, gathered by the Grim Reaper.

PARIS IN DRAG

The Seine is a 777 kilometer long river in northern France and a unique geographic entity. It is the most polluted body of water in the nation. Impacted by industry, agriculture and the population of Paris and surroundings for over a century, the river has the lowest oxygen levels of any body of water and the highest levels of ammonia, nitrates and fecal bacteria. It is the largest repository of untreated sewage in the nation and its turbid waters host nothing more than death. Nothing lives or can live in the River Seine. In its highly polluted character, the river is a unique natural form in France but not a unique venue in the nation. On July 26, 2024, its level of pollution was surpassed by an event billed as "the greatest show on Earth." This was the opening ceremony of the 2024 Summer Olympics, and featured Olympics athletes sailing down the River Seine, passing performers on bridges, banks and rooftops. It was a four hour spectacle whose symbolic significance was not lost on civilized people. A spectacular display of cultural pollution transpired along a river notorious for its record levels of physical pollution. As civilized people looked into the waters of the River Seine, they saw a reflection of the West staring back at them, the empty eye sockets and frozen, gaping mouth of the Grim Reaper, who had come to claim the souls of those who had abandoned reason. Civilized people knew the iron governing man and society, the law confirmed with terrifying consistency since time immemorial, the law that civilizations commit suicide whenever they abandon reason. They saw this law operative in ancient Rome, decreeing death and destruction on the Romans who had abandoned their pagan reason and embraced Christianity, anticonstitutionalism, caearism and the barbarians. On July 26, 2024, at the Thirty Third Summer Olympics, they saw this law on display in dazzling technicolor along the River Seine. They saw the suicide of the West replayed for nth time since the early years of the twentieth century, with only the names, faces and characters changed. They saw a dramatic, eye catching extravaganza of civilizational free fall before blue, white and red fireworks, and involving 6,800 athletes, 205 delegations, 85 boats and barges, and performances of ballet, choirs, chanson, cancan, opera, rock music and artwork coming to life, with the ceremony commencing with the arrival of the Olympic flame by relay, and concluding in the Trocadero, in Paris's sixteenth borough, across the Seine from the Eiffel Tower, the lighting of the cauldron, and the Olympic flame being carried away. They saw a monster called Marxism, a monster with a thousand heads, eyes and limbs marked gender, race and class, rearing its face in the artistic segments, in the boatloads of athletes floating down the river, in a thirty meter high hot air balloon floating above the city, in the torchbearers carrying the Olympic flame to and from the ceremony, in the rendition of John Lennon's peace at any price anthem Imagine, and in the speech given by the president of the International Olympics Committee, Thomas Bach, who proclaimed that the achievement of world peace and solidarity is more important than the protection of free institutions and the capitalist system: "You are part of an event that unites the world in peace. In a world torn apart by wars and conflicts, it is thanks to this solidarity that we can all come together tonight, uniting the athletes from the territories of all 206 National Olympic Committees and the IOC Refugee Olympic Team." Look at what civilized people throughout the world saw at the Thirty Third Summer Olympics. They saw the promotion of a religion called transgenderism, which denies the existence of DNA and sex chromosomes and proclaims that gender can be changed by human belief and action. They saw scientific facts and empirical methods sacrificed on the altar of trangender ideology. They saw transgenderist psychotics proclaim themselves to be both male and female, and neither male nor female, at one and the same time. They saw bearded, transgenderist drag queens proclaim their gender to be nonbinary, ambiguous and indeterminate. They saw a Gay, Lesbian and Transgender Pride Day. They saw a culture of Marxism take over nations, sports and athletic excellence. They saw gender benders withdraw into their minds, withdraw from reality and withdraw behind locked doors. They saw a celebration of violence in the name of revolution. They saw demons walk the Earth and peddle the subversion of rational politics and morality. They saw drag queens and decapitations overrun the rule of reason and the rule of law. They saw the fall of Europe and the fall of the West into a cesspool of Marxism and Islam. They saw the spread of Islamist tumor cells into every sector of society. They saw the values of the Enlightenment, the values of reason, sanity, science and freedom, immolated on the altar of Marxist-Islamist fundamentalism. They saw civilization submit to Islam and Islamist massacres submerge the streets in blood. They saw Islam infiltrate, corrode and dissolve the minds of the young. They saw left wing agitators form an alliance with the Community of the Faithful to defeat a common enemy: liberal democracy. They saw the acceptance and exaltation of a communist, Islamist, antiEnlightenment world view in the name of diversity and inclusion. They saw what they never in their worst nightmares ever imagined they would see. They saw the three thousand year old Olympic flame extinguished by anticivilizational movements marching under the banners of the Soviet Red Star and the Islamist Star and Crescent, extinguished before a global audience of tens of millions: "France unveiled a decidedly family unfriendly spectacle last Saturday for over 28.6 million viewers worldwide as the four hour opening ceremony for the 2024 Olympics, which unfolded along a 4.5 mile stretch of the River Seine in Paris, turned into the world's most watched Pride Parade. Because Western cultural elites today are overwhelmingly cultural Marxists, the organizers of the 2800 year old athletic competition decided to jettison any connection with sports, athletic excellence, or national pride, and instead promote the normalization of gender ideology. As always with Pride parades, the show featured the dancing of nonbinary performers. Transgender models and bearded drag queens abounded. One prerecorded dance segment featured three gender ambiguous dancers cavorting through the streets and into a building, where they ultimately entered a room and slammed the door in the viewers' faces, clearly suggesting that sexual activity would ensue. But the pointedly offensive lowlight of the ceremony was a blatant, live-action parody of Leonardo da Vinci's Last Supper painting, with Jesus Christ and his apostles swapped out for a diverse squad of gender bending narcissists. Jesus was replaced by a cleavage baring obese woman forming a heart with her hands, because 'Love is love,' don't you know. But that's not all! as the infomercial slogan goes. The Olympics organizers somehow thought it would honor the tradition of the Games by sending everyone to bed with nightmares over a performance by a headless Marie Antoinette singing the French Revolutionary favorite, Ah! Ca Ira. The word that leaps immediately to mind is demonic, a description that in fact suits the impulse behind the entire opening ceremony. Remember also that the Olympic flame had previously been carried by three drag queens along its route to Paris. What do drag queens have to do with athletic excellence and national pride? Nothing, of course; again, it's about celebrating and normalizing the subversive strategy of gender ideology. 'This is France!' left wing President Emanual Macron crowed in a tweet sharing video footage from the ceremony. Other French citizens begged to differ. Former French Culture Secretary Philippe de Villiers called the opening ceremonies a 'shame,' adding: 'We are committing the suicide of our country in front of the whole world. The Last Supper with drag queens and the beheading of Marie Antoinette add infamy to ugliness. The France of Macron and wokism is not France.' Populist right wing French MEP Marion Marechal, niece of Marine Le Pen, similarly said: 'To all the Christians of the world who are watching the Paris 2024 ceremony and felt insulted by this drag queen parody of the Last Supper, know that it is not France that is speaking but a left wing minority ready for any provocation. Not in my name.' Exmusician and Dissident Dialogues founder Winston Marshall summed up the debacle as nothing less than 'The Fall of Europe.' Criticism of Islam is unthinkable now throughout an increasingly Islamized western Europe, perhaps most tragically in a Paris that witnessed the Charlie Hebdo massacre almost ten years ago. Instead of rallying against the corrosive Islamist infiltration of the country in the wake of that attack, though, France has only accelerated its embrace of its own civilizational submission. The left would never undertake a similar campaign against Islam. Islam is off limits to criticism because the left sees Islam as an ally in their war on the West. Of course, if that war is ever successful, as it is becoming in Europe, Islamic fundamentalists will turn in a heartbeat on their left wing allies, who will find the hard way that diversity and inclusion are not sharia values. Thomas Jolly, the artistic director of the Olympic ugliness, claimed laughably in a press conference on Saturday that his intention had not been 'to be subversive, mock or shock.' He told reporters, 'Our idea was inclusion. We wanted to talk about diversity. Diversity means being together. We wanted to include everyone, as simple as that.' Surely not even Jolly himself can believe his patently false claim that his intention was not to mock or shock. Of course it was, although his deeper intention was arguably to normalize the antiWestern worldview of gender ideologues such as himself. " (The 2024 Olympics Turns Into Demonic Pride Parade by Mark Tapson). In the twenty first century, France has been overrun by an algae bloom. Toxins have discolored the nation and transformed it into a dead zone. Red tides have invaded families, homes, schools and offices. Flowing with Marxists, Islamists, drag queens and gender agitators, a rising sea of cultural subversion has flooded the River Seine, the Olympics, France and the West.

THE RED DECADES

Scene: American searchlight crew in France during World War II. Scene: Searchlights pierce the night sky during an air raid drill in Gibraltar during World War II. Scene: Members of a Royal Artillery searchlight detachment in Italy during World War II. Scene: Searchlights at New Year's Eve in Bonifacio, Global City, Philippines, in 2012. A searchlight: the most powerful outdoor electric light ever developed, with a concentrated beam reaching into the heavens which can be turned in any direction. On February 1, 1943. the United States Army's Signal Intelligence Service switched on a searchlight more powerful than anything which had ever appeared, and used it to expose treason. It was a searchlight called interception and decryption. On this day, the SIS initiated a program to intercept and decrypt messages transmitted by the intelligence agencies of the Soviet Union to Soviet agents operating in America. The Venona Project lasted thirty seven years and intercepted and decrypted over 3,000 messages. The individuals referred to in the messages were citizens of the West; they were clandestine assets and contacts of Soviet spies; and they were moved by a malicious intent to commit crimes, and they committed those crimes, and the crimes they committed made them the greatest single body of criminals in modern times. The program was initiated on orders from Colonel Carter Clarke, Chief of the Special Branch of the Military Intelligence Service. Clarke not only distrusted Soviet leader Joseph Stalin but distrusted US Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman as well, judging them to be soft on communism, tolerant of communism, sentimentally attached to communism through their domestic social policies, and unwilling to ferret out and expel communists in the federal government. He feared that had these presidents known about the Venona Project, they would have ordered it shut down. The searchlight called the Venona Project exposed the existence of communist infiltration and espionage activities in America which would mark out the decades commencing in the 1930s as decades of treason conducted under the aegis of the establishment, whose acts of negligence and complicity will live forever in the world's annals of infamy. Look at the once secret Venona decrypts, released to the world after the fall of the Soviet Union, and look as well at the communist public figures active in the twentieth century, and see the onset of an age of mass subversion which has endured up to the present day, and plunged the West into extinction by popular demand. Look at the decades beginning in the 1930s and see the establishment deny in the face of the facts the existence of communist spies and security risks active at all levels of the government. See the establishment condemn those who revealed such figures as persecutors of innocent people, violators of civil rights, and spreaders of unreasoning fear, baseless paranoia and epidemics of mass hysteria. See the people accused of spying for the Soviet Union revealed by the Venona decrypts to have been actually spying for the Soviet Union. See the establishment smear Joe McCarthy as a fountainhead of false accusations of communist sympathies, and then see McCarthy's cases vindicated one by one by the Venona decrypts. See the Venona decrypts reveal the existence of Soviet spies at the Manhattan Project's Site Y in Los Angeles, spies who were American, Canadian, Australian and British, including Klaus Fuchs, Alan Nunn May and Donald McLean. See the Venona decrypts reveal the existence of Soviet spies in the Army, the State Department, the Treasury Department, the Office of Strategic Services and the White House, including Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, Alger Hiss, Harry Dexter White, the second highest official in the Treasury Department, Lauchlin Currie, an aide to Franklin Roosevelt, and Maurice Halperin, a unit head in the Office of Strategic Services. See the establishment defend communists who advocated the violent overthrow of liberal democracy. See the establishment defend far left legends and stories and defend the cause of socialism. See the establishment give Academy Awards and the keys to Hollywood to Communist Party members and Soviet espionage agents. See the establishment defend as victims of witchhunts people blacklisted in Hollywood because of evidence of communist sympathies. See the establishment defend the Communist Party USA as a legitimate political party dedicated to freedom and opposed to tyranny. See the establishment defend communist screenwriter Dalton Trumbo. This devoted servant of the CPUSA defended Joseph Stalin in the name of the working class. When the Soviet Union and Germany signed the Nonaggression Pact, he condemned Allied intervention against Germany, in obedience to the party line, as an act of Western imperialism, and denied Hitler's crimes against France, proclaiming, "To the vanquished all conquerors are inhuman." When Germany invaded the Soviet Union, he changed his position, in obedience to the party, and advocated an Allied war against Hitler, in the name of a "people's war for freedom and justice." See the establishment defend the domestic voices of an international communist movement headquartered in the Soviet Union. See the establishment defend the communist infiltration of families, homes and neighborhoods. See the establishment defend the communist coloration of teachers, classrooms, lessons, textbooks and curriculums. See the establishment defend communist interests against national interests defending free institutions and the survival of the values of the Enlightenment: "One central left wing myth, underlying many other beliefs, is that the United States is a 'McCarthyite' society prone to 'Red Scares.' The belief props up the narrative the political left uses to pooh pooh any concerns about socialism these days, but itself is founded on a misleading understanding of history. According to the now standard media and academic storyline, the Red Scare was simply a case of rube politicians abusively harassing innocent teachers and actors, whom they falsely accused of being communist agents or assets, throughout much of the 1950s and 1960s —and such insane behavior could begin again at any time. The problem is that we now know for a fact that it wasn't just baseless paranoia. In the mid1990s the US government declassified the Venona cables, intercepted Soviet missives detailing postWorld War Two Soviet espionage activities within the United States, which means we now know that most of the more prominent persons accused of spying for the Russians during the Cold War were in fact spying for the Russians during the Cold War. Not that you're likely to see these revelations reflected in left wing syllabuses. One textbook, America, Past and Present, opens a discussion of the McCarthy and anticommunist era by presenting the Red Scare as paranoia, saying that the 'fear of communism abroad' was also turned against home front citizens not by Democrats but by politicians willing to exploit the public's deep seated anxiety.' The textbook frowns on the American public's response to worldwide communism: 'The Truman Administration, portraying the men in the Kremlin as inspired revolutionaries bent on world conquest, frightened the American people [who] viewed the Soviet Union as the successor to Nazi Germany'; 'the Justice Department further heightened fears of subversion [by charging] eleven officials of the Communist party with advocating the violent overthrow of the government.' The real story, the book hints, is the emotional reaction to these events, not the events themselves. No wonder, then, that Senator McCarthy, the textbook claims, 'failed to unearth a single confirmed communist in government,' despite keeping the entire Truman presidential administration 'in turmoil.' Hollywood certainly supports the preferred academic and journalistic version of the historical narrative. Films lionize Tinseltown dwellers accused of being communist spies or sympathizers during the Cold War. Most prominently, Trumbo—which drew several Academy Award nominations—focused on a screenwriter whose former membership in the Communist Party drew criticism from proAmerican celebrities like Hedda Hopper and John Wayne and led to his becoming unhirable under his own name during the Hollywood blacklist era of the 1950s and early 1960. Dalton Trumbo is the unabashed hero of the piece, which presents his financial difficulties in wrenching detail: he closes it by speaking about how the Blacklist 'victimized' everyone in what seems on the surface to be a conciliatory speech. There's just one problem with all of this tear jerking about 'civil rights violations': Dalton Trumbo was a communist, and so were most of those accused of espionage or other proSoviet activity during this period. Hollywood is repeating the same mistake as the activist lessons, textbooks, and articles that dismiss the Red Scare as a moral panic. But how did everyone get it so wrong? In part, it's because the US government concealed the truth. In the 2007 book Blacklisted By History: The Untold Story Of Senator Joe McCarthy and His Fight Against America's Enemies, renowned conservative historian M. Stanton Evans argues that much of the strong and immediate backlash to McCarthy's allegations occurred because the government wasn't about to admit how real McCarthy's worries were about infiltration. US officials from both parties 'weren't eager to have [the reality of] communist penetration on their watch, and their failure to do much about it,' broken down in front of the general public. The Venona Cables revealed the truth. Very often, Evans argues, 'these McCarthy cases were right there in the Soviet cables.' In other words, data recently obtained from no longer Soviet Russia demonstrates that specific individuals long thought to be martyrs of a kind were in fact 'Communists, Soviet agents, or assets of the KGB—just as McCarthy had suggested.' Why is this a problem? Isn't it still persecution of Americans for their private thoughts? Something we don't fully appreciate today is that being a communist at that time didn't just mean holding a mildly unfashionable opinion. As film critic Godfrey Cheshire notes in a review of Trumbo, the film is deceitful when 'it invites us to see the Communist Party USA as just another political party rather than as the domestic instrument of a hostile and ultramurderous foreign tyranny.' " (The Red Scare Was No Moral Panic by Wilfred Reilly). Throughout the West, homes, schools and offices are suffused with poison and radiation. Parents, children, teachers, employees, political leaders and owners of businesses have been sickened by a disease whose whose symbols are the red flag, the red star, the hammer and sickle, and the blackshirts of fascism, race Marxism, critical theory and gender Marxism. Detonated by the masses, the mushroom clouds of a cultural holocaust have reduced civilization to smoke and ashes.

PSYCHOLOGY GOES MAD

The word is derived from two Greek roots: psyche, meaning mind, and logia, meaning study. Psychology: the scientific study of the human mind. Civilizations throughout history have engaged in psychology. In ancient Egypt, a medical papyrus describes the study of depression and thought disorders. In ancient Greece, Thales, Plato, Aristotle and Hippocrates studied the workings of the human mind. The word first appeared during the Renaissance, in 1510 in the humanist Marko Marulic's book Psychology: On The Nature Of The Human Mind. During the Enlightenment in 1694, the physician Steven Blankaart wrote in The Physical Dictionary: "Anatomy treats of the body, while Psychology treats of the mind." Three thousand years after this noble, vital science was first studied, it has come under sustained bombardment and attack by the forces of cultural degeneration which have stricken the West. In the twenty first century, a monster stalks the world, a monster with a thousand heads, eyes and limbs and snakes flowing as hair, a veritable nightmare come alive, and it has mauled apart psychology. Assembled in the reading rooms of agitators and ideologues and greeted with standing ovations by the masses as it crashes into free institutions, this is a monster called Gender, Race and Class Politics and it marches under the red banners of Marxism. It is a variant of Marxism, and is this religion of class tribalism given a race and gender development, and it has reshaped the arts and sciences in its image, and in the process rendered them unrecognizable and destroyed them. It was natural and inevitable that once prophet Karl Marx declared war on the Enlightenment and founded his popular religion of class tribalism, in opposition to human reason and universalism, it would sprout offshoots and derivatives in obedience to the dark logic of tribalism. So it came about that one and a half centuries after the advent of the religion of the proletariat, the variants of race Marxism and gender Marxism would appear on the scene, and together with the original version, would declare war on liberal values in a wide ranging, multibarrel assault blasting out black power, radical feminism, gay and lesbian politics, transgenderism and radical environmentalism, together with the original call to arms of the "workers of the world." Look at the what the monster Marxism has done to psychology in the twenty first century. It has abolished the science and replaced it with religion. This religion has issued a series of proclamations which have sounded the death knell of three thousand years of scientific research and investigation into the human mind. The new religion proclaims that progressive psychology rejects the values of the Enlightenment and is a postEnlightenment descent into radical politics. It proclaims that progressive psychology is based on critical theory, and like its parent, is critical of reason, empiricism, individual rights and the notion of a race blind, gender blind society, critical of all the values which made the Enlightenment a beacon of hope for the oppressed throughout the world. It proclaims that a progressive psychology promotes race and gender discrimination and the disenfranchisement of white males in the name of diversity, inclusion and the highest form of fairness and equity. It proclaims that progressive psychology rejects the notion of objective, universal, transcultural, transracial and transgenderal truth. It proclaims that progressive psychology is political psychology and a weapon of far left revolutionary violence. It proclaims that progressive psychology demands that people who reject gender, race and class politics and do not fight for the rights of communist blacks, women and the poor be subjected to a campaign of aggression and harassment and be counseled to commit suicide. It proclaims that progressive psychology discriminates against white mothers who stand up for liberal democracy and threatens harm to them and their children if they do not change their beliefs. It proclaims that progressive psychology is a truncheon of political abuse in the hands of the people's commissars. It proclaims that progressive psychology seeks to manipulate, dominate and control people and reduce them to passive, rightless servants of the people's party line. It proclaims that progressive psychology includes the academic promotion of Marxism and the clinical counseling and advocacy of Marxism. It proclaims that progressive psychology rejects empirical insight, research and experimentation and is apriori witchdoctory peddling Marxist ideology. It proclaims that progressive psychology mandates that only communist blacks and women be hired to teach in the field. It proclaims that progressive psychology rejects universal liberal culture and promotes the multiculturalism of indigenous, African, Asian, Muslim, nonWestern savages. It proclaims that progressive psychology promotes the establishment of a global, single government, Soviet style society. It proclaims that progressive psychology denies the existence of DNA and sex chromosomes embedded in our cells and peddles the insanity that gender can be changed by means of human action or belief. It proclaims that progressive psychology is a champion of the marginalized sewer stratum of gay, lesbian, transgender communists in society. It proclaims that progressive psychology is staffed by Marxist professors, graduate students, advisors, interns, accreditors, curriculum designers, standards setters, peer reviewers and writers of recommendations who ensure that the doctrines of the faith are enforced and the voices of the dissent are kept out. It proclaims that progressive psychology is staffed by ideologues who teach, research, write and consult on Marxism in and out of academia in offices and businesses throughout society. It proclaims that progressive psychology is staffed by dogmatists whose task is to advance or destroy careers on the basis of adherence to Marxist norms. It proclaims that progressive psychology grants tenure to Marxist professors and tenure to nobody else. It proclaims that progressive psychology is staffed by fanatics whose task is to spread the Marxist gospel to doctors, lawyers, judges, teachers, and members of think tanks and public policy schools. It proclaims that progressive psychology rejects the notion of professional competence and is an exercise in Marxist indoctrination and agitprop. It proclaims that progressive psychology is a race and gender based identity ideology whose practitioners have the power to invade schools, hospitals, clinics, government agencies and private lives, to do what to civilized people is unthinkable and unacceptable to do, and to prescribe drugs to convert people to Marxism, commit people to mental hospitals to convert them to Marxism, deny people gun permits to convert them to Marxism, deny people public services to convert them to Marxism, and break up friendships and family relationships to convert them to Marxism. It proclaims that progressive psychology is staffed by proselytizers whose task is to carry the revelations of Marx to the people of the world, to army generals, members of royalty, US Navy Seals, mayors, psychiatrists, counselors, social workers, police chiefs, members of parliament, city council members, corporate officers and executives, presidents of nongovernmental organizations, and intelligence and counterterrorism agents, and lead a global movement to destroy civilization: "Since I left the Clinical Mental Health Counseling Masters Program at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville (UTK), I've been forced to confront the alarming truth that the entire field of psychology is under the sway of a dangerous ideology distilled from postmodern philosophy and critical theory. This ideology disguises its authoritarian objectives using the camouflage terms 'diversity, equity, and inclusion' (DEI). From my experience, this is an ideology that condones bullying students, pressuring suicidality, and punitively harming even single moms trying to support their kids if they are the wrong color and won't abide changing their beliefs. The end justifies the means. This ideology is not interested in seeking objective truth. The graduate level textbook Research And Evaluation In Counseling openly declares that in critical theories, 'research is viewed as a political endeavor that should facilitate social action.' The book does not challenge this stance. This is the same ideology that has led to widespread demands for DEI statements from educational faculty, librarians, and students. This ideology's reach now extends into the entertainment industry, the arts, many corporations, and, alarmingly, the medical and military sectors. Historically, psychology has been an easy instrument for political abuse. And where current research is in shambles, past insights into manipulation and dominance are frighteningly on point. With this in mind, let's get a better understanding of all the places psychology science professions have a foothold in influencing or controlling the behavior of the general population through both policy and direct contact by looking at career paths. There are three major tracks for professions in psychology: Academia, clinical counseling, and broader world settings. The academic track includes all the expected parties. Professors, accreditors, and researchers. These groups lead the field. Researchers run experiments and define the depth and breadth of scientific insights. Depending on where they are employed and their level of success, they may also have other duties. Accreditors set educational standards on everything from what will be taught to diversity requirements in hiring faculty to mandating mission statements that include multiculturalism, global society, and marginalized populations. Professors, of course, teach. They also act as advisors, design curriculum and tests, organize internships, do peer reviews, write recommendation letters, and otherwise gatekeepers the profession from socalled apostates. Faculty also participate in meetings where they decide on granting other professors tenure and oversee graduate students. Many professors are also responsible for producing research and writing in their field. Professors can also act as consultants to organizations, businesses, lawyers, and more. While this may seem a dry list of duties, consider that in each of these tasks, professors can either promote or destroy someone's career, share valid information, or push an ideology, often in a way that's embedded in instruction or by establishing norms." (Psychology Has Been Overtaken By A Dangerous and Pervasive Ideology by Suzannah Alexander). Under the repeated hammer blows of Marxism, psychology in the twenty first century has been reduced to a dark cave enclosed by blank walls. The prisoners in this cave see flickering lights and shadowy forms pass before them. They are trapped in a chamber of schizophrenia, a sealed capsule of psychosis, and cut off from all reality, see only the forms and flames of their own minds consumed by the cancer of gender, race and class politics.

DIVERSITY HIRE RUNS FOR PRESIDENT

A checkbox is a graphical unit of interaction which allows the user to register a binary choice. The user has to answer yes or no to a binary question. A checkbox is empty when unchecked and has a tick or cross inside when checked. A checked box means yes to the question asked, while an unchecked box means no. In America in the twenty first century, three checkboxes haunt the political landscape. They symbolize the descent of the nation into identity politics and the descent into Marxism. The descent was effected by the forces of cultural degeneration and transpired over the course of a century to the standing ovations of the people. It is a popular descent which commenced in the early years of the twentieth century, when America and the West embraced a new religion. Peddled by the people as progressivism, this religion called Marxism, founded a half a century before, declared war on the Enlightenment and rejected human reason and universalism, and championed tribalism in their place. To the prophet Karl Marx's original tribalism of the proletariat were added, by the dark logic of the new religion, race and gender politics in the midtwentieth century, and these developments produced a cancerous, metasticizing, wide ranging monster known as Gender, Race and Class Politics which would invade every sector of society and define the new establishment. In America in the twenty first century, the monster of gender, race and class politics has established a checkbox system of human selection which has achieved top ranks of the shame of the nation. Commencing in a revolutionary war to establish Anglo-Saxon liberty, Enlightenment liberty, and the natural, inherent liberty of all persons, for the American settlers in the New World, this new nation, conceived in liberty, descended two centuries later into a savage jungle of tribal politics. In this jungle, people are judged on the basis of their race, gender and support for Marxism, and the group of black, female Marxists is granted pride of place in the process of selection of candidates for public office and other prominent positions in society. In America in the twenty first century, the politics of race, gender and political correctness has overthrown the liberal society fought for during the American Revolution and established a society unrecognizable by civilized people. In America in the twenty first century, a tidal wave of black Marxism and feminist Marxism has produced a crest of scum the likes of which has never been seen before in the history of the nation. This crest is an ignominious trophy of the new political order and a crown on the degeneration of the West. Civilized people cannot believe what they see in the United States of America, in a nation which once protected the free world with its fearless leadership and fearsome arsenal, and embodied the liberal dream to smash the shackles of tribal politics and place all mankind under the rule of the constitution of freedom. This trophy and crown is a flesh and blood individual whose name is known throughout the world. She checks all the boxes mandated by the new racist, sexist, Marxist dispensation. She is black, female and Marxist, and on July 22, 2024, she was nominated by the Democrat Party to run for president of the United States, the first time in the history of the nation that an individual had been nominated by a political party to run for the highest office in the land because the individual was black, was female and was a supporter of Marxism. Her name is Kamala Harris and she is the distilled essence of America's free fall into a failed state, a public figure who has garnered the support of half the nation because of her gender, because of her skin color and because she hates America. Kamala Harris, nominated to run for president by America's new kingmaker, identity politics. Kamala Harris, supported by the institutional forces which run America, the forces of gender, race and class politics. Kamala Harris, supported by America's Marxist billionaire class, Marxist journalist class, Marxist Hollywood class and Marxist corporate leader class. Kamala Harris, supported by the popularity and resources of the Democrat Party, whose identifying mark of identity politics was burned into it by the Devil. Kamala Harris, sworn enemy of the conservative, libertarian, Republican, Trump supporting defenders of freedom in the nation. Kamala Harris, peddles Marxism and the reversion of society into tribal politics as the hallmark of progressivism. Kamala Harris, favorite daughter of the dominant far left, anticapitalist wing of her party. Kamala Harris, dedicated to the violation of the Second Amendment and to the confiscation of private guns. Kamala Harris, rejects liberalism, the political center and uniting the country, and seeks to effect a Marxist takeover of society. Kamala Harris, seeks to abolish modern technology and reverse the Industrial Revolution in the name of advancing green energy and a Green New Deal. Kamala Harris, seeks to establish a race based educational system by forcibly integrating black students and white students aboard school buses marked identity politics. Kamala Harris, seeks to establish a communist, government controlled medical system in the name of Medicare for All. Kamala Harris, seeks to establish government rent control, to criminalize rent increases, to prevent landlords from calculating market based rents, and to place landlords and the software companies which assist them under the control of the government. Kamala Harris, radical, rabid assassin on behalf of the Marxist establishment, trained to persecute on command the last dying voices of freedom and prosperity in America: "With Joe Biden's ignominious departure from the presidential race, it appears that Vice President Kamala Harris will soon be crowned the new, but not necessarily improved, Democratic nominee. She was the obvious choice not because of her many virtues (we're still in search of the first virtue, actually), but because she's second in line, she's hard to say no to (identity politics are a cruel mistress, lefties), and she's under 80, which apparently adds up to political inevitability. So be it. Republicans, conservatives, and Trumpers are inclined to scoff. Harris is scarcely more articulate than Sleepy Joe, and she can't blame old age for her stumbles. That may be, but it would be unwise to underestimate Harris and the powerful institutional forces that could, and almost certainly will, unite to support her–from rich donors to mainstream journalists to Hollywood celebrities to corporate leaders. Fundamentally, according to the polls, Trump is not popular, and the Democratic brand has remarkable staying power (and access to virtually unlimited resources), so it is entirely possible that Vice President Harris could be elected president. Let that sink in. Once it has, consider the possible ramifications. Republicans, conservatives, and Trump supporters will need to make a total effort this November to defeat Kamala Harris and the Democrats. They ought to strain every sinew because Harris is a uniquely radical and dangerous politician. Whereas Joe Biden always pretended to be a centrist and a uniter, Harris makes no such pretensions. She's a 'progressive' and a scary one at that. Harris is probably best known as an attack dog. In terms of her policy positions, Harris is a dyed in the wool 'progressive' and a favorite of the left wing of her party. She is a gun control extremist who would make a mockery of the Second Amendment. She has advocated spending trillions on a rapid shift to green energy and is closely associated with the Green New Deal. She supports busing public school students to promote racial diversity in schools. She has advocated Medicare for All, a dramatic expansion of federal funding of and control over health care. To illustrate Harris's approach to governing, consider a case study: rent control. As a US Senator, Harris praised an effort by the state of Oregon to criminalize rent increases over a certain threshold. She also put forward her own proposal to subsidize rent payments by instituting a federal tax credit for renters who pay more than 30% of their taxable income on housing. Meanwhile, the Biden-Harris DOJ is pursuing an antitrust case against a company for the unthinkable crime of using AI to help landlords calculate a fair market based rent. Consider the implications of these three measures, primarily if implemented together. Capping rents would disincentivize the construction of new rental properties, leading ultimately to supply constraints and higher rents. For example, it has happened before in Harris' hometown of San Francisco. Criminalizing the use of AI to help determine appropriate pricing would cripple many companies and quite a few government agencies, efforts to price their wares and services reasonably and efficiently, and it would mean unnecessary and hazardous government intrusion into the realm of artificial intelligence. Meanwhile, as rents escalate because of supply shortages that Harris' rent controls introduced and due to marketing logjams caused by frivolous legal persecution of landlords and software companies, Harris' enormously expensive tax credits would transfer the cost of higher rents from renters to taxpayers–in turn fostering higher taxes, or, more realistically, higher borrowing, thus risking elevated interest rates and higher inflation. And higher inflation, lest we forget, almost inevitably raises rents. Harris's approach to tackling the high cost of rent is, like so much of Harris' political reasoning, dangerously stupid. That's not the kind of approach you want to see from an aspiring President of the United States, needless to say. Republicans, conservatives, and Trump supporters have every reason to fight for the election of Donald Trump this November because of all the good that he can do for America, but they have an added reason now that Kamala Harris is the only viable alternative: she combines left wing radicalism with sheer recklessness and ignorance on a scale that would make her, if elected, a far greater threat to Americans' liberties and prosperity than Joe Biden ever was–and that's saying something!" (Kamala Harris Could Be Your Worst Nightmare by Nicholas Waddy). Over one hundred years ago, a girl named Alice entered a fantastic world by climbing into a mirror. Described in Lewis Carroll's Through The Looking Glass, this was a world in which reality was reversed like a mirror image and violated human sanity. It was a world in which A was not A. A world in which running was not running but made the runner stand still, walking away from something brought one closer to it, and chess pieces and nursery rhyme characters came to life. America in the twenty first century has entered into a world of insanity. Advocating the banning of fracking, the banning of private health insurance, the legalization of illegal alien migrant scum, and a mandatory government buyback of guns, Kamala Harris is the national voice of the age of decline.

RED DIALS SWITCH OFF FREE SPEECH

During the heyday of Western civilization in the Age of Enlightenment, a flame soared across the sky blazing with the light of truth. It taught the world about reason, science, empiricism and the freedom of the individual. It blazed forth out of such figures as Francis Bacon, John Locke and Isaac Newton and liberated people throughout the world oppressed by savagery and superstition. The Age of Enlightenment was the crowning glory of the West, and holding aloft its torch, the bulldozers of Western imperialism razed the shantytowns of ignorance and fear which blighted the nonWestern lands of Asia, Africa, the Southern Hemisphere and the Americas. Two hundred years after the Enlightenment, the flame which lit up the skies of the world has been surrounded and snuffed out by a barbed wire fence. This is a fence constructed by the number one religion of our time. Possessing a mass appeal to those who are afraid of freedom and angry at those who have more than they they, an appeal surpassing its predecessor Christianity, this religion is known as Marxism, and its dark imperative, like its predecessor's, is to enslave the body and mind of the individual and lock truth, and the freedom to discover and disseminate truth, into a dungeon. Two hundred years after the Enlightenment, a global movement is on the march which seeks to stamp out the freedom to discover and disseminate truth. It has spread a net across society and taken people who oppose the new order prisoners of conscience. Voted into power in one hundred years of landslides, in up ballot and down ballot candidates stamped progressive, Marxism as a mass movement has sounded the death knell of civilization and a case study of a law known for thousands of years: the law that whenever a civilization abandons reason and embraces religion, its dissolution happens in an instant in historical time. Commencing in the twentieth century, the process of dissolution of the West has been completed in a historical instant in the twenty first century, and upon its ruins is a monster stalking the world, a nightmare come alive with a thousand eyes, heads and limbs, breathing the fires of tribal politics derived, one and all, from Marx. Look at the ugly, frightening creature of Marxist gender, race and class politics and the world it created in its image. It is a global antitruth movement, whose size and scope are without parallel in history, supported by every sector of society, by government, corporations, the educational system and the media, and relentless in its suppression of the search for truth. It is supported by the majority in every nation, which believes that antiMarxist speech is a form of physical violence and must be stamped out. It has stamped out free speech in every place it controls, and rages like a wildfire at street corners and in college campuses. It has forced people to censor themselves out of fear of its political correctness police. It has established a regime of regulations and speech codes designed to stamp out antiMarxist speech as a form of hate speech. It has abolished traditional classroom discussions, marked by the search for truth, and replaced them with indoctrination sessions preaching from the classics of the faith. It has established a climate of fear on college campuses in which those opposed to Marxism are afraid to say what they believe, and those who speak out against Marxism are condemned as biased and offensive and are punished. It has established a regime of antiMarxist viewpoint intolerance on campuses which includes the purging of antiMarxist students and professors. It has evicted from campuses the conservative, libertarian, independent, Republican and Trump supporting voices of antiMarxism. It has established a regime in which antiMarxist thought is condemned as harmful and dangerous. It has established a regime which has rendered null and void centuries of struggle to speak truth out loud and oppose religion. It has established a regime in which antiMarxist speech is condemned as the greatest threat confronting the world. It has established a society in which people believe the government should not allow antiMarxist opinions to be aired. It has established a society in which people believe that individual rights should not be used to spread antiMarxist opinions. It has established a society in which people believe that free speech guarantees which protect antiMarxist speech are free speech guarantees which go too far. It has established a society in which people believe that antiMarxist speech tears down working class freedoms and must be stamped out. It has established a regime in which antiMarxist speech is condemned as disinformation and is stamped out. It has established a regime which has stamped out free speech on the grounds that it makes people vulnerable to the poison of antiMarxism. It has established a society in which people believe that free speech which protect the expression of antiMarxism is free speech which is out of control and protects too much speech. It has established a regime which has stamped out free speech as a threat to the safety and privacy of people. It has established a regime which has stamped out free speech on the grounds that its exercise in attacking Marxism is selfish and inconsiderate of the feelings of the Marxist majority. It has established a regime which has stamped out antiMarxist speech on the grounds that it serves corporate interests. It has established a regime which has stamped out antiMarxist speech on the grounds that it violates human dignity and the equality between the scum and the achievers of society. It has established a regime which has stamped out antiMarxist speech on the grounds that it kills innocent people. It has established a regime which has stamped out antiMarxist speech on the grounds that it constitutes noise, discordance, harshness and grating. It has established a regime which has stamped out antiMarxist speech on the grounds that it is fascist speech. It has established a regime which denies antiMarxists the right to speak and proclaims its duty to shut them down. It has established a regime which has stamped out free speech on the grounds that it is a tool of oppression of women, nonwhites, gays, lesbians, transgenders and the poor. It has established a regime which has deplatformed liberal values, rational arguments, the right to dissent against Marxism, and the institutions of the Enlightenment, and unfurled across the new moral wasteland a banner inscribed with the words, The Marxist Movement Has Won: "A global antifree speech movement that is now sweeping over the United States. While not the first, it is in my view the most dangerous movement in our history due to an unprecedented alliance of government, corporate, academic, and media forces. That fear was amplified this week with polling showing that years of attacking free speech as harmful has begun to change the views of citizens. As discussed in the book, our own antifree speech movement began in higher education where it continues to rage. It then metastasized throughout our politics and media. It is, therefore, not surprising to see the new Knight Foundation-Ipsos study revealing a further a decline in students' views concerning the state of free speech on college campuses. The study shows that 70 percent of students 'believe that speech can be as damaging as physical violence.' It also shows the impact of speech codes and regulations with two out of three students reporting that they 'self censor' during classroom discussions. Not surprisingly, Republican students are the most likely to self censor given the purging of conservative faculty and the viewpoint intolerance shown on most campuses. Some 49 percent of Republican students report self censoring on three or more topics. Independents are the second most likely at 40 percent. Some 38 percent of Democrats admit to self censuring. Sixty percent of college students strongly or somewhat agree that 'the climate at my school or on my campus prevents some people from saying things they believe, because others might find it offensive.' The most alarming finding may be that only 54 percent of students believe that colleges should 'allow students to be exposed to all types of speech even if they may find it offensive or biased.' That figure stood at 78 percent in 2016. The poll follows similar results in a new poll by the Foundation for Individual Rights and Expression (FIRE) of the population as a whole. It found that 53% of Americans believe that the First Amendment goes too far in protecting rights. So there is now a majority who believe that the First Amendment, including their own rights, should be curtailed. The most supportive of limiting free speech are Democrats at a shocking 61%. However, a majority (52%) of Republicans also agreed. Roughly 40% now trust the government to censor speech, agreeing that they trust the government 'somewhat,' 'very much,' or 'completely' to make fair decisions about what speech should be disallowed. It is no small feat to convince a free people to give up their freedoms. They have to be afraid or angry. These polls suggest that they appear both very afraid and very angry. It is the result of years of indoctrinating students and citizens that free speech is harmful and dangerous. We have created a generation of speech phobics who are willing to turn their backs on centuries of struggle against censorship and speech codes. Antifree speech books have been heralded in the media. University of Michigan Law Professor and MSNBC legal analyst Barbara McQuade has written how dangerous free speech is for the nation. Her book, Attack from Within, describes how free speech is what she calls the 'Achilles Heel' of America, portraying this right not as the value that defines this nation but the threat that lurks within it. McQuade and many on the left are working to convince people that 'disinformation' is a threat to them and that free speech is the vehicle that makes them vulnerable. This view has been pushed by President Joe Biden, who claims that companies refusing to censor citizens are 'killing people.' " ("The Movement Is Winning": Polling Shows Drop In Support For Free Speech by Jonathan Turley). Free Speech For Me But Not For Thee. The eternal cry of religionists down through the ages as they seek to enforce the doctrines of the faith and suppress the voices of reason. Free Speech For Me But Not For Thee. Article one of the Marxist constitution, whose global movement has hoisted the victory flag in the twenty first century of the most terrifying religion known to man.

LIBERAL LIBERTY VERSUS RATIONAL LIBERTY

It all began with John Locke. One of the most influential philosophers of the Enlightenment and known as the "Father of Liberalism," Locke gave systematic voice and expression to the Anglo-Saxon branch of Western culture. This was the branch which, in contrast to the German and continental branches, asserted the primacy of the individual over the collective. For Locke and for the Anglo-Saxon world, every person possesses a universal, fundamental and inalienable right to life, liberty and property, and the government must not violate these rights. The function of the government is to protect these rights, and governments which violate them and champion the rights of the collective over the rights of the individual lack legitimacy and must be overthrown. Locke founded the liberal doctrine of liberty as license as an explicit philosophical system and set into motion a chain of events which led to the British Glorious Revolution of 1688, the British Industrial Revolution beginning in 1760, American Revolution of 1776, the French Revolution of 1789, the establishment of liberal governments in Europe and South America in the nineteenth century, and efforts at liberalization in the Ottoman Empire and the Middle East in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Liberalism is a right wing doctrine because it affirms the primacy of the individual over the collective, but it does not exhaust the options available at this end of the political spectrum. There is another right wing doctrine, a doctrine little known in the West which has enjoyed no currency, but was the ruling doctrine in Classical, Apollonian, Greco-Roman culture. This is the doctrine of rational liberty, and it alone is based upon the nature of man. It is based upon a definition known for thousands of years. This is the definition of man as a rational animal. This is a definition affirmed by all sane, civilized, reality based people. The definition identifies reason is the unique power in man by which he survives and flourishes, in contradistinction to animals who survive and flourish by means of instincts. Sane people affirm that to be is to be something, and if man was not a rational animal, then man would have no nature or essence, and nothing in the universe would be anything. On the basis of the premise that man is a rational animal, the classical doctrine of rational liberty constructs a line of reasoning as plain and perspicuous as the noonday sun. The argument runs as follows. Since man is a rational animal, individuals who by their actions or omissions fail to realize this definition, are not morally speaking people and do not deserve to enjoy liberty. Since man is a rational animal, every individual has the right to rationally flourish and the duty to do so. Since man is a rational animal, liberty is not license but is a means by which man can survive and flourish as a rational animal, and liberty used in any other way, used to achieve any other purpose, is liberty abused and liberty which the individual does not deserve to enjoy. Since man is a rational animal, every person possesses a universal, fundamental and inalienable right to life, liberty and property on the condition that he uses these to realize the definition of man and to rationally flourish. Since man is a rational animal, the function of the government is to protect the individual's right to life, liberty and property provided that he uses these rights to realize the definition of man and to rationally flourish, and the government may deprive an individual of these rights in the event that he fails to use these to achieve this purpose. Since man is a rational animal, the principle of nonaggression does not protect individuals who do not realize this definition, and such individuals, being no better than animals morally speaking, may be aggressed against by the government. Since man is a rational animal, the principle of nonaggression held to be universally applicable is based on the false doctrine of moral subjectivism, and in the doctrine of rational liberty, has limited application. Listen to the Classical counterpart of John Locke, a philosopher who did for the doctrine of rational liberty what Locke did for the doctrine of liberal liberty, and gave it explicit voice and expression. Listen to Aristotle affirm that to be is to be something and it is not possible for an entity to exist without having a nature or essence or special function. Listen to him affirm that the special function of man, that which distinguishes him from all other forms of life, is the function of reason. Listen to him affirm that a morally good person is a rationally excellent person, one who realizes his special function, while a morally bad person is one who fails to do so, and a morally good person is alone entitled to enjoy liberty: "Presumably, however, to say that happiness is the chief good seems a platitude, and a clearer account of what it is still desired. This might perhaps be given, if we could first ascertain the function of man. For just as for a flute player, a sculptor, or an artist, and, in general, for all things that have a function or activity, the good and the well is thought to reside in the function, so would it seem to be for man, if he has a function. Have the carpenter, then, and the tanner certain functions or activities, and has man none? Is he born without a function? Or as eye, hand, foot, and in general each of the parts evidently has a function, may one lay it down that man similarly has a function apart from all these? What then can this be? Life seems to be common even to plants, but we are seeking what is peculiar to man. Let us exclude, therefore, the life of nutrition and growth. Next there would be a life of perception, but it also seems to be common even to the horse, the ox, and every animal. There remains, then, an active life of the element that is a rational principle. Now if the function of man is an activity of soul which follows or implies a rational principle, and if we say 'so and so' and 'a good so and so' have a function which is the same in kind, for example, a lyre, and a good lyre player, and so without qualification in all cases, eminence in respect of goodness being added to the name of the function (for the function of a lyre player is to play the lyre, and that of a good lyre player is to do so well): if this is the case, and we state the function of man to be a certain kind of life, and this to be an activity of the soul implying a rational principle, and the function of a good man to be the good and noble performance of this, and if any action is well performed when it is performed in accordance with the appropriate excellence: if this is the case, human good turns out to be activity of soul in accordance with rational virtue." (Nicomachean Ethics, Book I, Chapter 7). The Classical doctrine of rational liberty is a doctrine of hatred, intolerance and violence directed against individuals who have failed to survive and flourish in accordance with reason. It is a doctrine which seeks to create a permissive environment of hatred, intolerance and violence directed against individuals who have failed to survive and flourish in accordance with reason. It is a doctrine which does not recognize any fundamental rights or freedoms inherent in those who fail to flourish. It is a doctrine of extremism in the pursuit of rational flourishing. It is a doctrine opposed to liberal democracy and seeks to overthrow it. In the twenty first century, the doctrine of rational liberty has been suppressed and its advocates put into jail on the grounds that they reject the principle of moral subjectivism and advocate hatred, intolerance and violence directed against individuals who live like subhumans, and seek to commit acts of violence against them. The advocates of rational liberty have been suppressed and put into jail on the grounds that they advocate extremism in the pursuit of rational flourishing. They have been suppressed and put into jail on the grounds that they are opposed to the liberal democratic system of rights and freedoms for subhumans and seek to overthrow the system. In the twenty first century, the advocates of rational liberty have been captured by the political correctness police, placed into the same category as advocates of irrational doctrines, such as fascists, Islamists and national socialists, and evicted from society: "A new definition of extremism will block certain groups from government funding and meeting officials. Communities Secretary Michael Gove set out the changes in the House of Commons. What is the new definition of extremism? It says extremism is 'the promotion or advancement of an ideology based on violence, hatred or intolerance, that aims to: 1. negate or destroy the fundamental rights and freedoms of others; or 2. undermine, overturn or replace the UK's system of liberal parliamentary democracy and democratic rights; or 3. intentionally create a permissive environment for others to achieve the results in (1) or (2)' The government said it was 'narrower and more precise' than the previous definition, which was introduced in 2011. Which groups might be on the extremism list? Groups that meet the definition will be blocked from government funding and meeting officials. Mr Gove listed organizations that he said were a cause for concern under the new definition and would be assessed. They are: Patriotic Alternative. Antiextremism campaign group Hope Not Hate describes Patriotic Alternative as the UK's largest fascist group. Some of its followers were involved in the group National Action, which was subsequently banned under terrorism laws. Patriotic Alternative says its is promoting a patriotic view of the UK - but its critics say followers regularly espouse nazi thinking. British National Socialist Movement. British National Socialist Movement has been described in Parliament as a white supremacist group that originated in 1968. Muslim Association of Britain. The Muslim Association of Britain (MAB) was described by Michael Gove as the UK affiliate of the Muslim Brotherhood, an international and complex network of Islamist organisations. Islamism is a political ideology that believes that predominantly Muslim countries should be run according to a form of government drawn from Islam's holy book, the Quran. Islamism has many branches. Some Islamist groups are so extreme they are also terrorist--but that is not true for every such organization. The MAB denies it is an affiliate group and says it has long worked within the law and alongside agencies including the police. In 2015, then PM David Cameron commissioned a report into the Muslin Brotherhood including any activities in the UK." (What Is The New Extremism Definition And Which Groups Might Be On The List? BBC News, March 15, 2024). The doctrines of liberal liberty and rational liberty, both right wing doctrines, have joined forces to confront a common enemy. Their common enemy is socialism, the number one movement and religion of our time. They have joined forces despite fundamental differences between them concerning the origin and justification of rights. Liberalism justifies rights on the basis of moral subjectivism, and proclaims that the principle of nonaggression possesses universal applicability, while the doctrine of rational liberty justifies rights on the basis of the definition of man and affirms that those who do not realize this definition enjoy no more rights than animals and are legitimate targets of aggression. A world of difference which matters to those concerned with the success and survival of civilization.
